Howard K. Deischer

DEDICATION . . .

The year 1963 marks the end of the career of a truly great man. He has been an educator for thirty-seven years, serving as principal of Emmaus High School for eight years. His sometimes strict disciplinary measures were always tempered with a large measure of common sense and justice.

A leader in all fields, he served for many years as Athletic Director and President of the Lehigh Valley Athletic League. He will always be remembered for his "swim" after the Turkey Day Game.

It is with great pleasure that we, the Tattler Staff of 1963, dedicate this edition to Mr. Howard K. Deischer.

As the class of '63 grows older, it will realize more and more the importance of the faculty and administration without whose wise and constant guidance this class could not expect to achieve success in the widely divergent vocational and professional careers which they will enter.

Superintendent of Schools

Alleviating Shortage

Housing has been the main concern of the Board of Directors of the East Penn Union School District throughout the past year.

This group of seven elected men has been responsible for the financing of schools, the employing of all personnel, the maintenance of school property and the establishment of school policies.

The board has spent much time considering the problem of housing and at present is waiting for state approval of plans for a new junior high school on the land adjoining the high school, but separated from the main building. Plans are also well under way for an elementary school at Wescoesville. The board plans to meet necessity for increased classroom facilities by constructing a second junior high school or perhaps by adding prefabricated classrooms which could be erected as the need arose.

To inform itself more completely of the needs of students and teachers, the board has heard reports from various faculty department heads on the needs of their department.

These dedicated men, who formerly met once a month, have been meeting once a week in order to solve all problems necessary to keep up the high standards of Emmaus High School so that it can retain its accreditation by the Middle Atlantic States Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Mr. Lemmon C. Stoudnour, Superintendent of Schools, has worked closely with the board in the areas of hiring employees, planning the budget, and formulating plans for new facilities. Mr. Stoudnour has brought many recommendations before the school board and has been responsible for the smooth functioning of all the schools in the district.

Scheduling of student activities, maintenance of discipline, and the planning of faculty and student schedules are some of the tasks which Mr. Deischer, Principal, has accomplished. In general he has handled the operation of the entire high school.

Most students have had close personal contact with Mr. Frantz. He has handled the testing program, attendance records, and the organization of clubs. He has helped many seniors make their after graduation plans, filled out all college admission papers, prepared transcripts, and supervised guidance.

Personal Guidance At All Levels Helps Students

M. LUTHER SOUDERS, B.S., M.A.
SUPERVISOR OF SECONDARY EDUCATION

As Supervisor of Secondary Education in Charge of Instruction and Curriculum, Mr. Souders had five main duties. He observed the pupils and teachers in the classroom to make certain that state required material was being covered. By assisting the teacher in obtaining materials and securing proper textbooks, Mr. Souders made certain that achievements could be reached to satisfy the criteria necessary for a pupil who left school to fit into his proper place in employment or higher education. Mr. Souders also aided in the preparation of class schedules so that pupils met the requirements necessary for graduation. The teachers' in-service workshop program, which helped members of the faculty improve their teaching techniques, was another responsibility which Mr. Souders bore. Finally, he scheduled regular departmental faculty meetings at which teachers exchanged ideas and dealt with problems relating to their special fields.

High School Secretaries: Seated: Mrs. Betty Romig. Standing: Mrs. Ruby Adamchak, Miss Barbara Kelschner, and Mrs. Mae Barto. These women assist Mr. Deischer and Mr. Frantz, and often help students to find lost articles or to work out other problems. Their duties include all phases of work which directly concern high school affairs.

Choose Courses To Prepare For Professions And Vocations

ELMO C. MILLER
B.A., M.A.
ASSISTANT PRINCIPAL

Mr. Miller, Assistant Principal, was responsible for the functioning of the junior high portion of our school. He taught seventh grade guidance, which treated social living and orientation to the new school situation. He administered a mental ability and I.Q. test, an interest test, and an achievement test to seventh graders; by means of an algebra prognosis test he measured the ability of eighth graders to grasp algebraic concepts. Mr. Miller also gave interest, ability, and achievement tests to all transfer pupils entering seventh or eighth grade. The organization of the junior high school club program and the taking of the eighth grade attendance were additional duties relegated to Mr. Miller. He handled discipline problems which arose on this level and conducted personal conferences with all boys in danger of failing any academic subjects.

District Secretaries: Miss Anita Yoder, Mrs. Jeanne Berry, Mrs. Myrtle Baer, and Mrs. Marian Oxendale. These women work for Mr. Stoudnour, Mr. Shoemaker, and Mrs. Rezsek, handle all correspondence within the district, and keep all district records.

Retirement Ends Teaching Careers Of Two Faithful Teachers—Combined Years Of Service Total More Than 80 Years

MR. ERROL K. PETERS

Mr. Errol K. Peters has served as Supervisor of Music at Emmaus for forty years. When he came here, the population of the entire town was less than that of our present high school enrollment.

Through the years "Pop" has organized and directed countless numbers of musical festivals, school shows, and opera and theater groups.

Now "Pop" has decided to retire. His honors and awards are as numerous as his accomplishments and we, The Tattler Staff, can only wish him as much success in his retirement as he has had in his teaching career.

"Pop" Peters was happiest when directing a choral or orchestral group. This year's Christmas program reached an impressive finale as the chorus sang traditional carols and gay arrangements of modern Christmas tunes with true yuletide spirit.

Mrs. Dissinger showed a personal concern for each of the many students to whom she taught bookkeeping. Precise and exacting, she set high standards but was unfailingly helpful and fair.

MRS. GLADYS B. DISSINGER

Mrs. Gladys B. Dissinger began her career more than forty years ago by teaching grade school in Reading and Kutztown. After a brief period at Wilson Boro High School, she came to Emmaus to teach business in 1925. She holds a bachelor's degree from Temple University and a graduate degree from New York University where she is a member of Delta Pi Epsilon Fraternity for business teachers.

Her varied activities include being a Past-President of the Pennsylvania State Education Association, a member of the Eastern District Ethics, Rights, and Competence Committee of the P.S.E.A., a teacher of an adult Church School class, a worker in Christian Endeavor, and a member of the Order of the Eastern Star.

Throughout her many years of teaching, her inspiration to further her career has come from her husband and her parents.

The Tattler Staff extends wishes for a happy and rewarding retirement.

Guidance Staff Takes Personal Interest In Each Student

Leon Tuttle
B.S., M.A.
Mildred K. Strauss
B.A., M.A.

Mr. Tuttle counseled boys attending grades nine through twelve. He helped them to formulate their post graduation plans, and for those who were undecided, he arranged a consultation with a representative of the Pennsylvania State Employment Service. He received calls from parents and followed them through, helped to administer Iowa and Otis Tests, and gave an interest test to some seniors to aid the Employment Service.

As girl's guidance counselor, Miss Strauss interviewed each girl to ascertain that school work was being done in a satisfactory manner and that graduation requirements would be met. She attended to the posting of scholarship information and literature explaining vocational opportunities.

Miss Strauss had many duties beyond that of teaching ninth grade occupations classes. She set up the Cooperative Training Program for senior business students and contacted employers to arrange placement. She made an effort to visit each place of employment at least once during each student's term of employment. At this time she received confidential reports which covered the work performance, personality traits, and appearance of the student as judged by the employer and filed these reports for future reference.

Mr. Frantz, Director of Guidance, confers with senior Jim Kimmel — possibly about Jim's plans to enter college.

Illustrates Progress In Education

Facilities unlimited and an increase in the number of courses have enabled the science department to provide an education which has been stimulating to all who have studied here, from the basic science courses to the more complicated physics and advanced science.

All sophomores and freshmen were required to make science fair projects and the best of these projects were sent to represent our school in the Lehigh Valley Science Fair. The winners in this fair received a chance at state and national prizes and points were awarded which could mean scholarships for talented students.

From those not participating in the fair, science related term papers were required and these, although not done on a competitive basis, gave the students a knowledge of many topics which might otherwise have gone untouched.

Chemistry dealt with the make-up of substances and the practical use of chemistry in industry and home life.

Physics provided an interesting blend of science and mathematics while it demonstrated many basic principles needed to better understand the world around us.

In addition to these more complex areas of science, general science courses stressed the application of science to everyday living and gave a sound fundamental knowledge to those preparing directly for a vocation.

In all courses the great physical facilities of our school were put to use. Experiments and demonstrations were an important part of all courses and audio-visual aids were used often to supplement lectures and classroom discussions.

Lectures, demonstrations, films, projects, and dissections combined to make biology interesting. Mr. Miller finds sophomore group 10-7 responsive as he explains the theory in the day's assignment prior to the day's experiment.

Mathematics Department Expands Present Curriculum

"The three R's", of which mathematics is one, have long been considered the fundamentals of education. It is true, therefore, that mathematics has been a vital part of everyone's education throughout the past year. From the most basic arithmetic to the most complicated algebra and solid geometry, mathematics has been an exercise in logical reasoning and clear intelligent thinking.

Problems have ranged from the simple addition of two digit numbers to figuring the odds on a roulette wheel and proving theorems with three dimensional objects.

GEORGE E. BLYER, B.S., M.S.—Algebra, Trigonometry, Solid Geometry — Adviser: Mathematics Club.

ALBERT H. BURGER, B.S., M.A. — Plane Geometry; General Mathematics.

HAROLD S. HUBER, B.S. — Mathematics.

CHARLES F. IRWIN, SR., Ph.B. — Mathematics — Adviser: Stamp Club.

Not Pictured: HENRY A. FARRAR, B.S. — Algebra; Advanced Science; Plane Geometry — Adviser: Engineering Club.

Algebra, for most students, has always required much concentration. This 9-4 class appeared to be deep in the land of X's and Y's, with only an occasional interruption by Mr. Black, to disturb their pensive mood.

To Meet Demands Of National Science Program

Thus students have become proficient at arithmetic, algebra, plane geometry, solid geometry, or trigonometry, all of which will help them if they go on to college and most of which will be useful when they take a job.

Mathematics, more than any other subject, has taught a student to think clearly, for the answer was right or wrong—there could be no guessing.

The business world and the world of science have needed more people proficient in mathematics for some time. Realizing this, our school is planning to add a course in Analytical Geometry and Calculus for next year.

MARY IOBST, B.S. — Mathematics — Adviser: Knitting Club.

ALBERT L. HENNING, B.S. — Algebra; General Mathematics — Adviser: Model Airplane Club.

PAUL F. KISTLER, B.S. — Mathematics — Adviser: Visual Aids Club.

RICHARD L. BLACK, B.S. — Algebra; General Mathematics — Coach: Swimming — Adviser: Archery Club.

Seniors taking Solid Geometry and Trigonometry have just finished a test on the use of the slide rule. Some of the students seem to be relaxing in the informal atmosphere typical of Mr. Blyler's classes.

English Department Stresses Fundamentals

A moment before dismissal the photographer has caught the attention of Mrs. Bieber's Public Speaking Class, but she seems unaware of the interruption.

Communications has always been a problem with men. Realizing this, our English department has endeavored to provide all students with a basic knowledge of the English language.

This has been accomplished through the study of grammar, vocabulary, punctuation, and literature. All of these things helped to teach people to say what they meant. This was often accomplished by having students study literature, thus observing the methods of communication used by other people. Throughout the year there were thousands of periods, commas, semicolons, and other punctuation marks placed in countless sentences. Vocabulary played an important part in all English courses and helped students to gain freedom of expression. This freedom was exemplified in many themes, discussions, and contest entries. Diagramming of sentences—a nemesis to many students—was only part of a study in grammar which taught students conformity to the rules set down by scholars before them.

All these things the English department has tried to exemplify, all working toward the ultimate goal of clear expression of thoughts and ideas.

JEAN H. BIEBER, B.S. — English; Public Speaking — Adviser: "Tattler", National Honor Society.

GLENN F. JOHNS, B.A. — English — Coach: Track — Assistant Coach: Football — Adviser: Cross Country and Track Club.

GERTRUDE J. GORDIN, B.S. — Language Arts — Adviser: "E-Hive".

To Develop "One World" Concept Through Study

As the world has become smaller the need for better relations between countries increased. Realizing this, the administration has seen fit to begin three-year and four-year language courses.

These courses were designed not only to teach a language but also to make students familiar with the cultures of other countries and the problems which arise there.

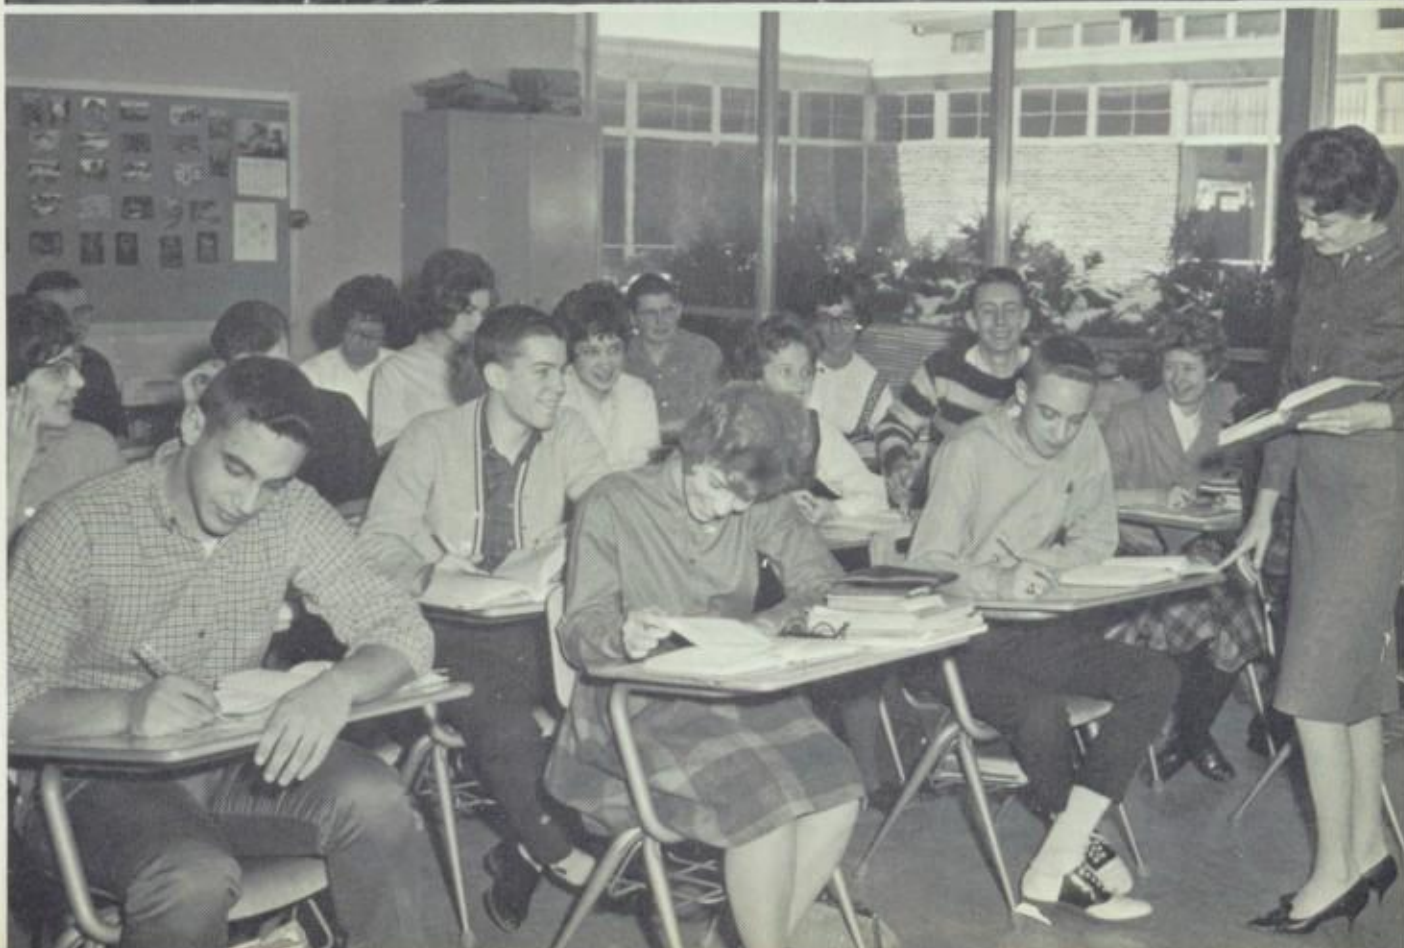

The installation of a language laboratory has been a great aid in mastering pronunciation and improving translation of the spoken and written language. Through this media teachers have been able to work with students as a group, individually, and in small groups of two or three. Tape recorders have enabled students to correct their own mistakes and to profit by hearing native speakers.

The language laboratory has been a help, but it did not replace many hours of study dealing with vocabulary, grammar, idioms, exceptions to rules, and stories that proved very puzzling indeed.

Studies in French, Spanish, German, and Latin played their part in expanding appreciation of cultures existing beyond our borders.

Students of French find Mr. Schaad and Miss Novak patient and willing to offer help where needed. 11-1 and 11-3 find the incomprehensible become clear and meaningful under their guidance.

KENNETH D. WESSER, B.S., M.A. — Pennsylvania History; World Cultures — Adviser: United Nations Club, Youth for Christ.

Standing:

WILLIAM L. LOBB, B.A., M.A. — Problems of Democracy — Director of Athletics — Coach: Football.

EVAN E. RICHARDS, B.A., M.A. — American History; Geography — Assistant Coach: Football.

ROBERT G. HILL, A.B. — Social Studies — Assistant Faculty Manager — Assistant Coach: Track, Grades 7 and 8 — Adviser: Hunting and Fishing Club.

By Evaluating The Past And Stressing Democratic Principles

Social studies was an integral part of everyone's education at Emmaus High School. This study of the past made possible a realistic outlook on life for students about to take their places in society.

Geography gave students a better understanding of the relative positions of other countries and a knowledge of their domestic problems.

Pennsylvania history provided a new enlightenment concerning our home state. The making of relief maps and travel logs supplemented textbook study to add variety and interest. Debates on anything from Blue Laws to the voting age gave practical experience in organizing thoughts and expressing ideas.

American history, long notorious for current events quizzes, provided a basic knowledge of the American Heritage and of our Constitution and its meanings.

The study of civilization in World Cultures classes gave rise to innumerable reports and discussions.

Seniors, in their study of Problems of Democracy, gained experience in doing research, giving reports, and viewing life. A mock trial instructed all in courtroom procedure and methods of law. All information was later verified by field trips to the County Court House, the State Hospital, and the County Jail. The election of borough officials presented an opportunity for a colorful political campaign, complete with rallies and speeches. These officials later took over the running of the borough for a day.

Emphasis was placed on helping the student to understand the social, political, and economic situations with which he will become involved.

Prior to the opening of mock trials, Mr. Lobb pinpoints methods of procedure to section 12-2.

Keith Knauss effectively pleads his case to an attentive jury during a mock trial in Problems of Democracy Class.

Students will soon be citizens in a court of law where they must hand down unbiased judgment.

Study Of Art And Music Improves Cultural Background

JACK M. LONG, B.S., M.Mus. Ed.—Instrumental Music; Director: Senior and Junior Bands — Adviser: Dance Band.

ERROL K. PETERS — Music — District Director of Music — Director: Chorus, Orchestra.

RONALD MOSEMANN, B.S. — Elementary Music Supervisor — Director: Cadet Band.

VERNA SEAGREAVES, B.S., M.A. — Music — Adviser: Eighth Notes; Seventh Grade Music Makers; Boys' Glee Club.

CLARENCE R. ROEDER — Art — Adviser: Chess and Checkers Club, Grades 7 and 8.

MARY E. MILLER, B.S. — Art — Adviser: Scenery Design Club.

Attractive display cases and excellent musical shows were but two of the many ways in which students exhibited artistic expression. They applied their talents and gained a deeper appreciation for the talents of others.

For the more gifted students opportunity for advanced study was provided. Projects such as clay modeling, the creation of mosaics, wood carving, and designing mobiles kept students busy and interested.

Chorus, band, and orchestra gave the musically inclined a chance to appear in public in many fine shows and concerts put on each year. In addition groups entered various regional competitions, and the band shows at football games were always anticipated with great enthusiasm.

Of the countless number of programs Mr. Peters directed during his long career, the Christmas program always seemed most outstanding.

LEON L. TUTTLE, B.S., M.A. — Health; Physical Education — Guidance — Adviser: Investment Club.

Heading the President's plan for increased physical fitness, our physical education staff stiffened its requirements, updated its curriculum, and stimulated student interest in healthful activities.

The physical education department has tried to expose everyone to football, soccer, field hockey, tennis, basketball, swimming, wrestling, gymnastics, track, and baseball, hoping that an interest in one of these sports might develop.

Indirectly students have learned teamwork, sacrifice, the will to win, the value of hard work, and the feeling of accomplishment after a job well done.

Mr. Shaak and student teacher, Mr. Getman, supervise the building of a pyramid. The 11-4 boys apparently enjoy it.

Carolyn Phillips, executing a straddle-vault over the horse, demonstrates one type of physical training required of girls.

Home Living And Industrial Arts Provide A Variety

Senior Home Living girls learn to arrange proper table settings, to serve graciously, and to act as hostesses. An annual Christmas Tea for the faculty affords practical experience.

Home living courses provided girls with an opportunity to learn the basic skills of homemaking—cooking, sewing, child care, budgeting, and good grooming. The girls in this department maintained an attractive showcase, put on a fashion show for which they made the garments, sold the tickets, and served as the models. They also sponsored an open house for the faculty at Christmas time and acted as hostesses for a dinner for the superintendents of local high schools.

Some phase of home living was scheduled for all girls, grades 7 through 12. Not to be ignored were a group of boys who showed interest by forming a Chef Club. Although extra-curricular, their basic instruction followed that offered to girls in the planning, preparing, and serving of meals.

Mrs. Frankenfield's elective group chooses projects freely and works independently.

Of Practical Activities For Interested Students

Industrial Arts provided courses in woodworking, electricity, metalworking, printing, and mechanical drawing. Seniors could choose the shop of their choice, while all other grades were given a program involving all the shops. Projects were made from plans in the department or were products of the students' ingenuity.

Many groups realized considerable saving by availing themselves of the print shop's facilities for producing tickets and posters. Mr. Heckman and his students handled the printing of programs and brochures for high school concerts, programs, and sports events.

Under Mr. Child's supervision boys studying manual arts served as stagehands for all programs held in the auditorium. They were in charge of lighting, scenery, props, and stage arrangement.

WILLIAM T. SHECKLER, B.S. — Wood Shop — Coach: Tennis — Adviser: Table Tennis Club.

Dave Stoudt, Ken Fey, and Dave Nelson work on their respective projects in elective wood shop classes.

Clerical And Secretarial Courses Provide Practical Business Training

Business education offers students a working knowledge of the fundamentals they will find useful after graduation. These courses develop the secretaries, stenographers, bookkeepers, clerical workers, and salesmen who will take their places in the world of business.

Courses such as business English, bookkeeping, business law, business mathematics, typewriting, office practice, shorthand, transcription, and economics have given students the necessary qualifications for useful employment. Recognition for outstanding achievement in typewriting and shorthand falls to deserving students.

Linked with classroom study is a practical program for seniors in which they are employed by area business men for two weeks and are given a chance to use their skills in realistic situations. For this employment they receive no remuneration other than experience and a possibility of employment.

Constantly watchful to prevent error or to offer assistance, Mrs. Dissinger checks the progress of each girl in her 12-4 bookkeeping class.

In this atomic age modernism in education forms the foundation on which future progress depends. A fresh and original viewpoint is the keynote of the curriculum offered at Emmaus High School. This modernistic outlook is typified by the graduates who, having gained significant knowledge during their high school years, now optimistically prepare to take their place in the world of 1963.

Romance Blossoms

President Linda Schleifer assumed leadership and with Vice-President Brenda Welland, Secretary Donna Caulton, and Treasurer Carol Oels immediately set to planning the annual freshman musical, "Frosh Follies", presented on February 6, 1960, used as a theme a colorful and entertaining voyage to Mexico, Latin America, and Hawaii. During the trip a son-filled romance blossomed between the main characters portrayed by Maynard Dreas and Linda Grueneberg.

In Spring Musical

Diane Ludwick and Keith Knauss were well cast as a middle-aged married couple on their first real vacation. Their quarreling and subtle humor enlivened the imaginary voyage. The two couples met on board ship and enjoyed the local color of the ports of call by means of singers and dancers in supporting roles. Financially and artistically, "Frosh Follies" was a successful and refreshingly original production.

Sophomores Elect

Climaxing the social season for the Class of '63 was a delightful dance held in Cafeteria I. "Swingin' in Spring" was the first and only freshman sponsored dance; however, careful planning and an attractive decorating scheme indicated prospects of many enjoyable social affairs in the future.

The year ended. Leaders had emerged, potential was evident, and the class was on its way.

Competent Leaders

Added responsibilities during the sophomore year were tackled with characteristic efficiency. Dale Fink became class president, a position to which he was re-elected in both junior and senior years. Completing the corps of officers were Donna Caulton, vice-president; Carol Oels, secretary, and John Leaser, treasurer. At the initial meeting a majority vote decided the class colors to be green and white and the class flower, a white rose.

St. Valentine's Day was celebrated with a dance appropriately named "Rendezvous of Hearts". Local disc jockey Dale Arthur provided music for dancing in the Cafeteria, romantically decorated with countless hearts and cupids.

February meant also the deadline for science projects. Extensive competition challenged many sophomores to abandon themselves to research. Rewarded for her patience and effort was Diane Frey, whose project "Auxins and the Abscission Layer"

Juniors Find Iowa

In September of 1961 two hundred eleven juniors eagerly returned to accept both the tasks and the privileges that came their way. The class quickly settled down to work in a year that was to be filled with new and interesting subjects, increased social demands, and the seemingly endless series of mental ability tests.

One of the most important of these was the Iowa Test of Educational Development given on December 7 and 8.

Tests Perplexing

The class average was seventy-four percent. Paul Fichter, Susan Zanger, Wayne Schmoyer, Michael Johnson, Alexander Tamerler, Keith Knauss, and James Kimmel showed their outstanding ability by scoring in the ninety-ninth percentile.

In March the National Honor Society invested twenty-five juniors in an inspiring candlelight ceremony symbolizing the aims of that organization. Later in the month Michael Johnson, Richard Hendry, Jim Lutz and Mary Hunsberger obviously enjoyed "living it up" Dogpatch style after the Sadie Hawkins Dance.

Linda Grueneberg, Marcia Bednar, and Marguerite Kemmerer battled for first place in the annual Junior Declamation contest. At the finish, however, Carolyn Phillips proved her dramatic superiority by capturing the honors with her interpretation of "I Stand Out in the Crowd."

Anticipated Dreams

Then, to the murmur of excited voices and the music of royal fanfares, Dale Fink, president of the class, announced Carol Billman, Donna Caulton, Cathy Meckes, and Linda Schleifer as members of the Prom court and Carol Oels as the Prom Queen. After leaving the Frolics Ballroom juniors headed back to the high school gym, where they were treated to sandwiches and cokes and entertained by a jazz combo and a hypnotist. The senior farewell, "Commencement Capers," closed the door on the years as underclassmen.

Seniors Now Become

Well accustomed to high school life by this time, seniors returned to EHS in the fall of 1962 with an almost nonchalant outlook. This year they were to be at the top of the ladder and could relax, letting the "underclassmen" (which in senior vocabulary equals "vassel") carry the load. However, realizing that they were looked upon as pacesetters, the seniors changed their manner.

School Pacesetters

Apparently well satisfied with the incumbent officers, the seniors re-elected them by a voice vote. Soon they were enthusiastically planning the year's social activities. The Sadie Hawkins Dance launched the season by reversing accepted customs; it was absolutely a girl invite boy affair. Moreover, the dance gave students a chance to break culture's restrictions on apparel and everyone dressed "Dogpatch style."

Enjoys Class Play

In November the class play, "Mr. Barry's Etchings", was presented by thirteen amateur thespians. The play, a three act comedy, amused the audience as much as it amused the cast. Bob McGuire excellently portrayed Judson Barry, a world-seasoned artist whose etchings curiously resembled $50 bills, while Helen Ashcraft and Janice Graef performed commendably in the supporting roles of Barry's sister and niece respectively.

Students Control

The Senior class was prominently represented in these groups as well with Pam Baumgartner and Susie Kunkle heading the cheerleaders, Carol Willis leading the majorettes, and Elaine Richards directing the color guards. The honor of being elected Football Queen fell to Pam Baumgartner for her spirited devotion to the game. She reigned over the Turkey Day festivities, the Victory Dance and traditional bonfire.

Borough For A Day

All the fervor of a bona fide political campaign characterized the one waged by candidates for student-borough government offices. Aspirants made their final bids for votes with speeches and fan-fare at an election eve rally.

Several weeks later the government of the town was the responsibility of Mayor Roy Afflerbach, Councilmen Blair, Kat-chak, McGuire, Meckes, Sole, Ros, Trot-ter, and Wagner, Tax Collector Fey, and Assessor L. Schuler.

Home Economics? Not exactly. Bonnie Yandle, Nancy Hein, and Sharon Gardner set aside routine to enjoy the Christmas season.

Staff Introduces

Dreams of leisure vanished quickly for the thirty-six seniors who accepted responsibility for publishing the forty-first edition of the Tattler. Harrassing as the task sometimes became, they worked uncomplainingly. The staff introduced the use of natural-color end sheets and revamped the senior section. Innovations such as these typified the spirit and philosophy of a forward-looking staff who worked hard to finance and create a yearbook of which they might be proud.

New Yearbook Format

As the year progressed, academic honors fell upon several students who distinguished themselves in scholarship competition. Mike Johnson and Ches Snow placed as semi-finalists in the National Merit Scholarships ratings, while Carolyn Phillips, Susan Zanger, Keith Knauss, and Alex Tamerler received certificates of merit. Through their achievements they earned recognition for themselves and added distinction to their school as well.

It was a rare practice indeed, when these two ad libbers, Dale Thompson and Barry Nierhaus, followed the score.

Graduation—An End

Time passed quickly by. Warm spring days caused a peculiar restlessness and a predisposition to relax. The seniors felt torn between eagerness to be free of school and apprehension at facing a completely new life. There was little time for conjecture. There were too many things for which to prepare—Senior Ball, final senior assembly, yearbook distribution, final exams Baccalaureate service, commencement.

And A Beginning

This year's seniors were outstanding in many ways. They ranked high scholastically; they were the guiding force in student government; they initiated many projects; they performed with the band, orchestra, and choruses; they took the lead in clubs; they competed athletically; they led a lively social life; and they staged plays and talent shows. They were a credit to their school.

Seniors welcomed a new elective—notehand—and worked hard to meet Mrs. Yeager's standards for speed and accuracy.

Farewell E.H.S.

As they go their separate ways, they will feel secure, knowing that the experiences they have compiled, the knowledge they have obtained, and the skills they have developed have prepared them to meet life confidently and achieve their goals. Their presence in Emmaus High has left its impression upon the school; in turn, their experiences here have become an indelible part of their lives.

"To live in hearts we leave behind
Is not to die."

—Thomas Campbell

In Memory Of
Fabian Thomas Pierog

Fabian lives in our memories as a great friend and talented musician.
Active in many phases of school life, he was especially known for his snappy drumming in the school bands.

Underclassmen are reaching the point where they must for the first time begin to make important decisions on their own. Developing mature ideas concerning their futures becomes their primary task. Now while they are completing high school they are acquiring the knowledge which will help them make these difficult decisions intelligently in the light of their capabilities.

classes

Eagerly 276 juniors returned to school in the fall of '62. The class was comprised of nine sections enrolled in the various courses of study: college preparatory, general, clerical, secretarial, and industrial.

Leading the class in its social and business affairs were its officers. Elected early in the term were Andrea Rockwell, President; Jack Jones, Vice-President; Peggy Bartholomew, Secretary; and Barbara DeVries, Treasurer.

December brought two days of concentrated effort when the Iowa Tests of Educational Development were administered to all juniors. Test results revealed a class average of seventy-four per cent. Fourteen students distinguished themselves by achieving a ninety-ninth percentile rank.

In tune with the holiday spirit the first of three dances, "Holiday in Red", was sponsored December 22 in the cafeteria. Arriving couples were delighted to see the festive Christmas atmosphere produced by gay streamers and colorful trim.

Immediately upon returning from a twelve day Christmas vacation, officers and committees attacked the project of planning the Junior Prom. It turned out to be an affair long to be remembered. Several hundred class members and guests danced to the music of Bud Rader in Archibald Johnson Hall, Moravian College, Bethlehem, on April 26. After the dance a police escort led the dancers back to Emmaus for an after-prom party planned and supervised by representatives of borough civic organizations.

It seemed no time at all until the year's end rolled around. Musical programs, spring sports, and studying for final exams filled balmy spring days.

The class closed the term by expressing its best wishes to the seniors in the form of a Senior Farewell Dance in June. This affair not only served as a goodbye to the Class of '63, but also brought the realization to the juniors that their senior year was just a few short weeks away.

Sophomores Plunge Into All Phases Of School Life

Recently freed of the title "lowly freshmen", the sophomores displayed a care-free, devil-may-care attitude. They were upperclassmen now and seemed determined to take their rightful place in school life.

After a hard-fought campaign, complete with petitions, political posters, and campaign buttons, the day for electing class officers arrived. The victorious candidates were Randall Seagreaves, President; Matthew Breidenthall, Vice-President; Allen Wambold, Secretary; and Daniel Romanchuk, Treasurer.

The first sophomore dance featured a contemporary theme. "Beatnik Party" on January 26 was a departure from the conventional and was well received by the large number of students in attendance. This dance and the traditional dance in May were the principal fund raising projects for the year.

Tenth graders were strongly represented on athletic teams, in club activities, and in musical organizations. Junior Varsity football teams achieved enviable records and owed much of their success to the spirit with which the boys took part. The same fighting enthusiasm drew the attention of spectators at J.V. basketball games. They lent their talents to the marching bands, dance band, and choral groups.

Service to school and community through membership in school service clubs pointed out potential leaders. Student Council accepted their ideas and welcomed their efforts. Key Club and United Nations organizations on the high school level afforded an opportunity for them to establish good public relations between the school and the community at large.

Mr. Tuttle and his tenth grade health class graciously accept interruption by photographers.

Frosh Devote Time And Talent To Theatrical Venture

School life became more serious for 360 freshmen who found themselves confronted by many strange duties. For the first time it was necessary to organize and function as a class. At their opening class meeting the class accomplished the first step in organization by electing class officers. Sharing the burden of leadership with Glenn Eichman and Renee Nonnemacher, president and vice-president respectively, were Starr Saylor, secretary, and Lucille Feather, treasurer.

"Which Way West?", the annual freshman show, provided a means of displaying musical and dramatic talent. This mirthful tale of four college students singing their way across the United States was written and directed by the elective music class under the supervision of Mr. Peters. Members of the Freshman Music Club formed the nucleus of the cast. The show was presented in the high school auditorium, February 9, 1963, to an appreciative audience.

The class was divided into ten classroom sections according to curriculum selection. Courses of study offered to ninth graders were academic and general, the former being geared to the needs of college preparatory students, the latter being designed to accommodate those planning to follow clerical or vocational careers.

Eighth Graders Assume Positions Of Leadership In Junior High

Upon returning to school eighth graders reflected a sense of importance because of their new status. Before long they realized that there were many new challenges to be met. A year's experience served them well, and they devoted themselves to serving as guides to the newly-arrived seventh grade class.

The Junior Student Council looked to them for leadership and was not disappointed in the ways in which they handled positions of responsibility.

Interest in national and international relationships led them to assume a prominent role in the United Nations group organized for students on the junior high school level.

Scholastic, athletic, and social experiences during the term were planned to prepare them for making intelligent decisions concerning future courses of study. The time had come for them to select the programs they wished to follow in the senior high years ahead.

Two social functions, a Christmas dance and a farewell in spring, proved enjoyable and financially successful. These dances marked their first venture into E.H.S. social life.

Newcomers To E.H.S. Temporarily Baffled

New teachers, new subjects, new classmates, and a completely new routine dazzled and bewildered incoming seventh graders. However, with admirable spirit these youngsters from various elementary schools integrated themselves and began to function as class unit.

After a few short weeks, many appeared in an entertaining operetta, "Three Pink Leprechauns," presented November 30. A second musical program, the spring concert, was equally successful.

Others not involved in choral organizations displayed interest and leadership in sports, hobby groups, and the Cadet Band.

Many distinguished themselves through academic achievement. In the annual science fair students entered projects which showed evidence of talent and imagination.

With so much academic and social activity, it was easy to understand why the term seemed to pass so quickly.

Visiting Senorita Captivates Faculty And Student Body

Willing to attempt anything, Maria tries the trampoline, and the forceful bounce comes as quite a surprise.

This year Emmaus High School has had the honor of having Maria Asuncion Sole Ros as its foreign exchange student. She arrived in this country from Vila Franca del Panades (Barcelona), Spain, in August of 1962, on a scholarship arranged by the American Field Service. During her year in the United States Maria lived in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Milton W. Wood of Alburtis, Pennsylvania.

Maria found school life quite different from that to which she had been accustomed in Spain. The changing of classes and the extra-curricular activities were just two of the variations that she enjoyed. The informality of the classes and the football games, which were strange to Spanish school life, also delighted her.

It has been a great privilege to have Maria with us this year. We hope that she has enjoyed her visit with us as much as we have enjoyed being with her.

Maria calls the Woods her "American family" and takes an intimate part in their family life. Scott, Pat, Judy, and

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Wood are happy to consider Maria one of them and view her return to Spain with regret.

Staff Creates Record Of School Life At E.H.S.

"Not already?" was the typical reaction of the editors and staff members alike as their deadline remained a few days away. Quickly final pictures were selected and identified, copy rewritten, and layout reorganized. The major portion of work which required painstaking hours of planning and arranging was finally completed and sent to the printer with the hope that the end result would portray the dynamic activity present at Emmaus High School.

A fashion show and a hoagie sale were sponsored to raise funds to increase our capital, but our prime objective was to create a publication with a new look which would recall memories of high school days.

Accurate reporting, excellent procedure, and diligence combine to make the "E-Hive" both informative and attractive. To improve the journalistic quality of each newspaper, Miss Gordin, the adviser, explained different techniques needed to advance skill. The superior quality of the newspaper articles was recognized by the Lehigh Valley Tuberculosis Society and the Call-Chronicle newspaper who awarded the "E-Hive" first place in their health contest. This in turn was followed by a first place State Award.

Eager students bought subscriptions promptly after receiving a free one-page edition on the first day of school. Succeeding editions contained accurate accounts of student activities, a spirited editorial, club news, sports news, a column on locker room gossip, the boy and girl of the month, the car of the month, plus engaging features. A special Christmas edition, printed in green ink, was published and featured a poem depicting the normal vacation of an Emmaus High School student entitled,

Reporters are ever present in the center of any school activity, mentally formulating an enjoyable account of the action. The typical staff member occasionally pops a question to an unaware student, writes down the immediate exclamation, and smugly rushes to another prospect, leaving his victim bewildered and confused. But not for long! In the next issue his exact words of reply will appear to be read and frequently laughed at by everyone.

The staff functions with the purpose of not only publishing a newspaper but also sponsoring student activities and selling products to help supplement its treasury. After two years of successfully carrying out these purposes, members receive a silver charm or key chain.

The executive positions of the editor-in-chief and the departmental editors for the following year are filled by the incumbent editor-in-chief, thus assuring experienced leadership.

Governing Body Council Sponsors

Perpetual desire to improve the school and community supplemented with incessant zeal and enthusiasm was conducive to the success of the Student Council. One student was elected by each homeroom to represent them and present their ideas to the governing body.

Extensive planning resulted in offering students social functions and activities as often as possible. Student Council sponsored dances in the gymnasium after home football games drew an average crowd of several hundred. Outstanding projects included a mammoth hayride, a spaghetti dinner followed by a full-length popular movie, and a victory bonfire and dance following the Thanksgiving Day football game.

Contests run by the Council brightened student life. The day preceding Thanksgiving vacation, they held Color Day, a day when classes competed to see how many students dressed in green and gold. At the same time they held an election for the Football Queen, and had a contest to determine whose class had bought the greatest number of tickets for the Turkey Day game. On April Fool's Day students wore clothes that flashed; the day was appropriately titled, "Flash-Clash Day".

The school store, under Student Council's auspices, sold innumerable articles—winter jackets, letter sweaters, sweat shirts, stuffed animals, pennants, book covers, and all necessary school supplies.

Cultural interest was encouraged by posting a list of all ensuing cultural events and by the sale of books on the best-seller list in the school store.

This body was considered one of the most eminent service organizations in the school. This year it contributed $343.00 to charity organizations. It frequently offered money to clubs with financial difficulty and bought needed equipment for the school. The Student Council frequently became involved in community projects when its representatives served as delegates to community committees.

Representatives attended conventions to obtain new ideas. Two important conventions attended by the officers were the four-day Student Council Summer Workshop and the three-day Pennsylvania Association of Student Councils Convention.

The Council took pride in bringing the second foreign exchange student to Emmaus High. Maria Sole Ros came to us from Spain. Meeting her gave all students an opportunity to learn of a culture different from their own. It was another great step in developing understanding through association.

The Junior High School Student Council patterned its objectives to coincide with those of the senior council, thus developing potential leaders.

Group Honors Mr. Deischer In Unusual Assembly

Thirty-seven members of the Emmaus High School Key Club surprised students and faculty with a well-planned testimonial for retiring principal, Mr. Deischer. Working with extreme secrecy the group planned and presented a special assembly in honor of Mr. Deischer. Upperclassmen entered the auditorium January 29 expecting to see an hour long movie. Instead they witnessed a delightfully nostalgic presentation of "This Is Your Life, Mr. Deischer." Civic leaders, former school mates, brothers and sisters, and Mrs. Deischer were alerted by the Key Club members to gather for the event. Students became aware of the countless contributions made by the man who has been principal for eight years as a church and community leader, and whose guidance will long be remembered by students at E. H. S. Anecdotes told by lifelong friends amused the audience and Mr. Deischer himself.

The motto of the Key Club was "We Build". Their purpose was to serve home, school, and community as well as the nation and God. In keeping with the motto and purpose the club made arrangements for the United Nations Model Assembly. At all basketball games, since the club's organization in 1961, coat check services were provided for the fans.

The group, sponsored by the Emmaus Kiwanis Club, attended various church services during the course of the year. As a community service the young men distributed voting guides to all homes in the borough of Emmaus.

Under the guidance of Mr. Hawk, the Key Club had a highly successful year and will be remembered for its accomplishments.

Artistic Talent Channeled To Create Stage Sets

Busy sessions such as this resulted in strikingly colorful Christmas paintings for every homeroom, attractive display cases, and creatively designed back drops and props for school plays and musicals.

Although design and construction of scenery for all plays and programs was of primary interest, students electing to belong to this club created projects in all phases of art.

Twenty-four members, each having an interest in art and the talent to pursue it, comprised the first club of this type. Miss Miller, adviser, had long felt that a specific group should be responsible for scenery. By having assigned people taking care of this task repeatedly for each stage presentation, those requiring the service could depend upon experienced workers to handle stage arrangements methodically.

Decorating the art showcase at the bus entrance to the building continually kept the club busy making projects in various media for display. Patterns in mosaic were replaced by oils and in turn by mobiles and abstracts.

Holiday pictures ranging from snowy landscapes to fireside settings and from moving religious subjects to jolly winking Santas brightened homeroom bulletin boards at Christmas time. Teachers and students alike appreciated this artistic touch at holiday time.

Boys Perform Important Tasks Behind The Scenes

Available for service at any time, the Stage Crew, under the direction of their adviser, Mr. John Child, was indispensable. Public shows, assembly programs, civic productions, junior and senior high operettas, and the senior class play showed the success of their many efforts in the construction of scenery, manipulation of lights, and management of stage equipment.

Many free periods and after-school and evening hours were spent in preparing sets and adjusting lights and sound equipment necessary to a well-planned, successful production. Veterans, too, were on hand willing to teach the beginners how the equipment was to be handled.

This fun loving group of boys was also a very well organized crew. Each had a special function to perform and they all knew when they were needed. The crews were categorized according to assigned duties: curtain and properties, scenery, lighting, and sound. Never did this well trained group of boys disappoint anyone in charge of a stage production.

Youth for Christ is a group of students bound together in Christian fellowship for the purpose of "Living Christ on the Campus."

The members of this busy club are all participating in activities to earn $160 to help send Walt Landis to South America for the Teen Team. In return for their kindness he came to visit their meeting February 8 and gave a lecture on his experiences.

One of their many featured guests was Mr. Earl Poysti, representing the Slavic countries, who spoke on the Communist Youth Festival; they also presented a movie on the "Faith of Yuan Tai".

Quite frequently the Youth For Christ Club had rallies and contests.

Bonnie Leibert, captain of the quiz team, prepared the team for quizzes against Easton, Quakertown, Liberty, William Allen, Dieruff, and South Mountain on the Letter of St. Paul to the Hebrews and the Gospel of St. Mark. One of the many exciting functions of this club was the Capital Teen Convention on December 27, 28, and 29 in Washington, D. C. Robert Palmer, Cynthia Lynn, Eunice Ettinger, Linda Dries, Bonnie Leibert, and Glenn Seem attended to represent the E. H. S. organization.

Tri-Hi-Y

To create, maintain, and extend throughout the school, home, and community high standards of Christian character were the principal aims of the Tri-Hi-Y.

This service club, under the direction of Mrs. Jean Clay, devoted its time to helping the needy. Members collected for the March of Dimes January 29; they visited the Good Shepherd Home and the Tipton Orphans' Home where they did their best to bring cheer and entertainment to those less fortunate than themselves.

As a change from their more serious work, a dance December 14 and a doughnut sale February 22 were fund raising projects to finance a trip to New York in April.

Home Nursing

Girls interested in nursing both in the home and as a vocation comprised the Home Nursing Club. Members gained valuable information in first aid under the professional direction of Miss Graver. Many sacrificed their study periods and early dismissals to work in the health suite during the nurse's absence. Students and faculty alike were greeted with helpful courtesy when seeking the services of the girls in charge.

In bi-weekly meetings Miss Graver supervised instructions in the correct procedures to follow in daily household and school emergencies. Practical knowledge of this kind was designed to be of value to future housewives or professional nurses.

Hope Of Earning National Honor Society

Always busy on one project or another, officers confirmed the chapter's faith in them. They were: Dawn Miller (Vice-President), Catherine Meckes (Secretary), Robert McGuire (Treasurer), Mrs. Jean Bieber (Adviser), Marcia Bedner (President).

President Marcia Bedner, who presided over the induction ceremony, lights the candle of life while candidates wait to be installed.

Membership Stimulates Scholastic Effort

Scholarship, service, leadership, and character are the traits of a well rounded student. To promote these ideals to all students and to honor students who had achieved these goals was the mission of the National Honor Society.

The Emmaus High School chapter is part of the National organization. Membership in our school was offered to those having achieved honor roll rating in $\frac{1}{2}$ of the rating periods. Since the organization is national in scope, its principles were governed by policies set down by administrators in Washington, D. C.

The induction ceremony on March 5, 1963, turned out to be impressive and meaningful. Parents of inductees and students became aware of the society and its precepts. Speeches, capably delivered by Diane Frey, Carolyn Phillips, Michael Johnson, and Richard Hendry, four members of the society, emphasized the importance of scholarship, service, character, and leadership in life.

At regular monthly meetings plans for service projects and fund raising events filled the agenda. Funds were allocated for purchasing special books for the school library, purchasing the coveted NHS keys, and bringing cultural enlightenment to Emmaus High School through lectures and guest speakers.

This year they were fortunate in securing the Rev. John Joseph Stoudt, historian, author, and outstanding authority on Pennsylvania German art and folklore. His illustrated lecture on the cultural heritage of the Pennsylvania Germans was enthusiastically received.

Students Acquire Training For Teaching Careers

One profession that constantly demands energetic workers who are desirous of enriching their lives by passing their own knowledge on to the leaders of tomorrow is teaching.

The Future Teachers of America Club, under the adept and proficient leadership of Mrs. Yeager, tried to prepare its members for college and to instill in them the high ideals and standards of the teaching profession.

Girls readily learned what service was and what it entailed, whether by serving as hostesses at Open House or by performing for a day as a student teacher in one of the many elementary schools of the East Penn Union School District.

No matter what her chosen field of specialization, each member of this worthy club acquired a compact knowledge of teaching—its requirements and rewards.

Careful study of college entrance requirements assisted the girls in choosing courses which would be both basic and useful. Practical teaching experience did much to alter the classroom attitudes of girls who had found themselves on the "other side of the desk."

Girls Devote Free Time To Maintain Library Efficiency

Among the most important and extremely beneficial service clubs of our high school was the Library Club. Any period of any day in the week one found several industrious girls assiduously shelving new or returned books, mending worn books, tending to the library desk before and after school, and seeing that the library was kept neat and orderly at all times.

During club period Mrs. Hinkle taught junior librarians the skills of library procedure as well as the correct way to file books.

As a Christmas project, the members gave unselfishly of their time to help brighten the lives of the retarded children at the Day Care Training Center.

There was a social side too. As in years past the club took a bus trip to New York to see a Broadway show.

Each girl's dedicated service made the club worthy to be a member of the Teen-Age Library Association.

Chemistry Intrigues Young Scientists

Chemistry and its importance in today's world was discussed by a small group of boys comprising the Chemistry Club.

Mr. Haven Knecht, club adviser, taught the basic fundamentals of chemistry and provided an atmosphere of information and materials to broaden each boy's understanding of this subject. Members learned how to calculate the result of each experiment before it was actually set up. They gave reports, viewed films, held informal discussions, had guest lecturers speak on some phase of chemistry. They made field trips to industries where chemistry was basic to its continuance.

Basic concepts that were taught here provided a sound foundation for future study in the field of chemistry.

Advanced Problems In Mathematics Probed

Mathematics, an impossible subject for some, simply presented a challenge for the small group of five mathematicians who were members of the Mathematics Club.

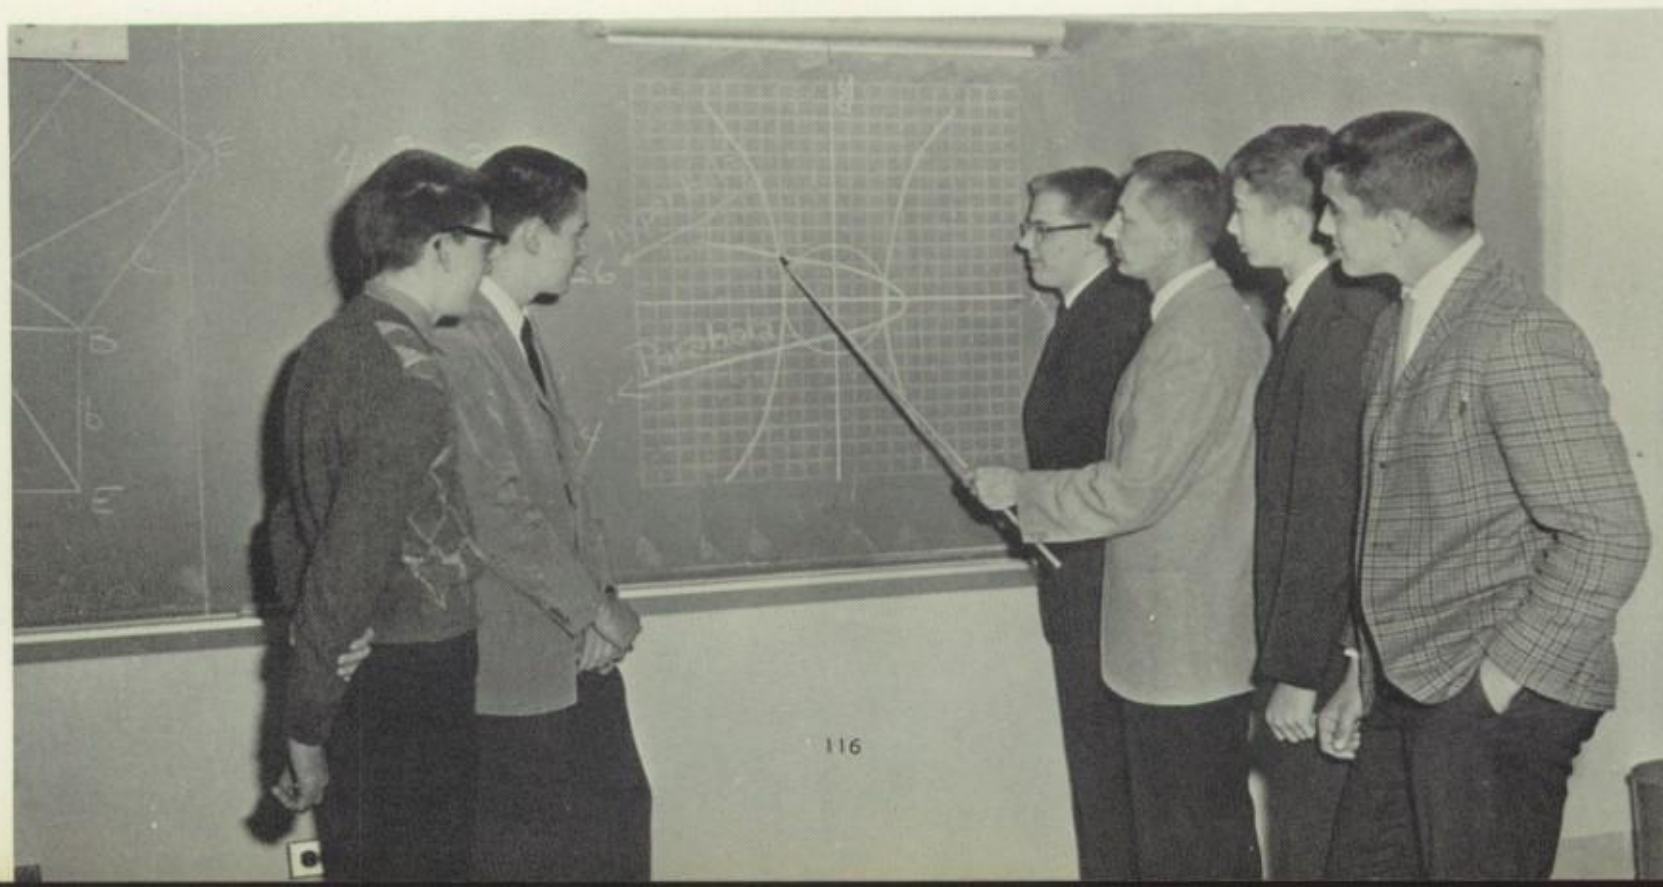

Working with numbers, equations, graphs, and diagrams kept these students pleasantly occupied for hours on end. The club adviser, Mr. George Blyler, instructed these boys in areas of mathematics not normally covered in mathematics courses. They discussed such things as the binary number system and its relation to computers, the conic sections—divisions of a cone, and topology. For variety, the members enjoyed a mathematical puzzle or an algebraic riddle now and then.

No matter how complicated problems became, the members of the Mathematics Club attempted to solve them and eagerly looked for more.

Mr. George Blyler (Adviser) presents the problem for the day to Mathematics Club members Charles Lichtenwalner (Secretary-Treasurer), David Peters (President), Donald Yeakel, William McHose (Vice-President), and Richard Rubens.

Trained Students Help Faculty With Visual Aids

Boys Handle Maintenance Of Equipment

Whenever one found motion picture equipment being set up, whether in the auditorium or in any one of the individual classrooms, one could be assured that the boy setting up the equipment was a capable and proficient member of the Projectionist Club.

With agile movements he deftly worked the projector with its many knobs, buttons, levers, and lenses. Rarely did the projection of a motion picture go wrong under the conscientious watchfulness of any one of the members of this club. The club adviser, Mr. Edward Schultes, trained and instructed members in the proper procedure to be followed while operating any of the various projectors. Boys were also responsible for the proper care that was to be taken of all visual aid equipment while in use or while in storage.

Although using and maintaining equipment was their most obvious duty, boys spent many hours performing tasks of a clerical nature. Organizing and co-ordinating all visual aids materials in the building and creating a visual aids center consumed the major portion of any free time these students happened to have.

Handling the rental or purchase of films and film strips was still another responsibility. Listings and notifications of films on hand were promptly prepared for faculty use.

Teachers or guest speakers requiring assistance found projectionists to be efficient, willing, and courteous.

Visual Aids Members Study Use Of Projector

Teaching in the classroom was very often supplemented by the use of motion pictures, filmstrips, or slides. Since the average student had little or none of the training necessary to handle this equipment properly, Mr. Paul Kistler organized the Visual Aids Club to provide opportunity for training.

This junior high group learned fundamentals of handling, maintaining, and operating visual aids machines. They performed a great service to the school by assisting teachers in showing sound motion picture reels and film strips during class periods. This assistance permitted teachers to be free to discuss the pictures as they were being shown without having to worry about the mechanical side.

Early instruction such as this was designed to prepare members to enter the senior projectionist group as experienced personnel.

"Ham" Operators Make Friends Throughout The World

At Emmaus High School eleven radio "bugs" formed a club, logically called the Amateur Radio Club. This club, under the advisership of Mr. Daniel Trainer, stressed the basic fundamentals of radio work. Novices learned the construction of a radio and its proper maintenance.

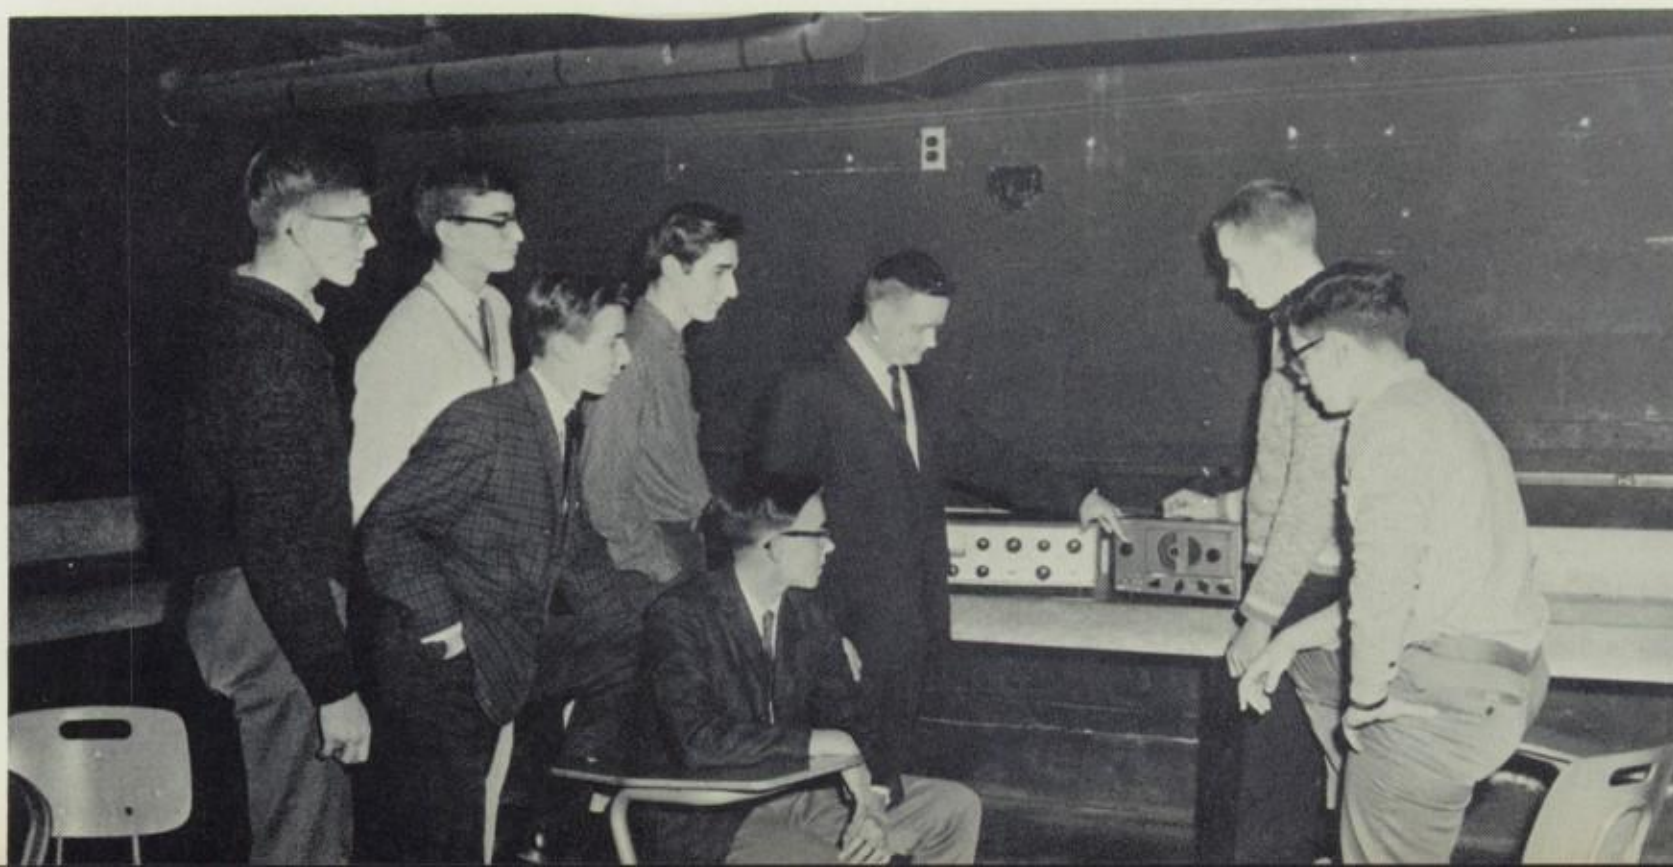

Members became aware of the importance of ham operators and the parts they play in world-wide communication.

Their ultimate goal was to see a radio station established in Emmaus High School. For this reason they spent much time in the study of the rules and regulations of the radio code, so that they might obtain a license and make their wish become a reality.

Centering attention upon Mr. Daniel Trainer (Adviser) are club members Willard Martin, Wayne Schmoyer, Thomas Andrew (Secretary), Robert Makep, Thomas Gable, David Wiley (President), and Robert

Beginners Learn Basic Typewriting Skills

Bells ringing, the staccato click of keys, and the slamming of carriages characterized a typical typewriting club meeting. Club membership consisted of students whose curriculum did not include typing either as a required or an elective course.

A lighter touch to make practice sessions more palatable was the innovation of typing to music. So to the rhythm of a waltz, the cha-cha, or a martial air novices gradually developed skill equal to that of experienced typists. Mrs. Tulio's ingenuity was evident.

Amateur Thespians Present Christmas Play

Under the leadership of Mrs. Tremba, the Drama Guild offered instruction in the theory of stage craft and an opportunity to apply it. Proper diction, poise, expressive delivery, and correct application of make-up were several of the topics discussed during club periods.

Theatrical experience was gained through the production of the annual Christmas Play in a special assembly.

In addition to their roles as cast members, they were responsible for staging and scenery design as well. The club journeyed to a metropolitan center late in the term to see a professional play. Upon returning they revealed their impressions of what they had seen. Students agreed that what they had learned in study groups had made them a more appreciative and critical group.

Club Motivates Interest In German Culture

The German Club sought to augment the study of the language by fostering interest in the country itself as well as its customs and the daily life of its people. Ultimately this, it was hoped, would create better understanding between the two nations.

To this end the members of the club, in addition to their discussions at regular meetings, corresponded with

German students of approximately their own age, and held a progressive dinner with various dishes of German origin served in courses at different members' homes.

Visual aids were used at meetings as an aid to creating an awareness of the geographical, cultural, and educational aspects of Germany. Most informative were Miss Hauser's accounts of her recent trip abroad.

Students Investigate French Customs

A clearer understanding of the customs and traditions of the French people was developed through membership and active participation in the French Club.

An understanding of their language served as a strong link in acquiring an appreciation of the French. Members of the club corresponded with French pen-pals. This proved invaluable in becoming acquainted with the character and personality of the typical Frenchmen. Information about customs was obtained first-hand, and therefore was much more rewarding than learning of them from a book.

To acquaint themselves with French culinary art, the members also enjoyed a progressive dinner.

In spring the French Club took a field trip to New York where they toured a French ship and tried out their conversational French by speaking to native Frenchmen. The girls found Miss Novak to be a pleasant companion as well as an excellent guide.

Model Assembly U.N. Highlight Of The Year

Nguyen Huu Nghia
U.N. Foster Child

To understand the concepts of the philosophy and achievements of the United Nations organization and to develop a stronger understanding of the other countries, was the purpose of the United Nations Club of Emmaus High School. Under the guiding hand of Mr. Wesser, the members of this club studied about other countries individually and in relation to the world picture.

To aid each member in obtaining first hand experience in dealing with the problems of the United Nations, an annual United Nations Model Assembly was staged with other United Nations Clubs in the area. This year, the Emmaus United Nations Club had the privilege of hosting the Seventh Annual United Nations Model Assembly, which is sponsored by the Foreign Policy Association of the Lehigh Valley. Participating were 346 students, representing seventy-seven nations. After the close of the assembly, all delegates attended the reception and dance planned for them.

The United Nations Club also journeyed to New York to see the United Nations in action, presented a Senior-Junior assembly program of students from foreign lands, aided the Peace Corps by collecting magazines, and supported a child through the Foster Parent Plan.

Certainly peace achieved through service, was the by-word of this club.

Seated: Sue Jeffers (Secretary), John Ashcraft (Treasurer), John Richards (Vice-President), Allen Yarus (President), Susan Balmat. Standing: Beverly Breneman, Penny Follette, Patti Lou Faust, John

Barto, Debra Paist, Steven Karp, Louise Heckman, Craig Wofsy, Wayne Ocha, Randolph Grim, Debbie Graner, James Wisser.

Junior U.N. Aids In Support Of Foster Child

Seventh and eighth graders organized to form the counterpart of the United Nations Club. They adopted the same ideals as the senior club: to promote a better understanding of the world and its countries and to appreciate the efforts that are extended by many nations to establish world harmony.

During the club period seventeen energetic members, under the constructive guidance of Mr. Robert Thomas, constantly pursued knowledge through the study of foreign lands, their customs, their life, and their position in respect to the world. They attempted to study the points of view that other countries may have and the background and motivations that establish their ideals and standards.

The Junior United Nations Club worked jointly with the United Nations Club in the sponsorship of a child through the Foster Parent Plan. This child was a Vietnamese boy named Nguyen Huu Nghia. Each month, the club sent money collected for club dues to be used towards Nguyen's support.

Through the unceasing efforts of the members of this club, the workings of the United Nations were presented clearly to all.

Boys Master Military Precision In Drills

As long as there has been a United States, there has been a military service. Many are unaware of the job the military performs, especially during peace time. For this reason the Scabbard and Blade Club was organized. This club, under the leadership of Mr. Bruce Polster, fostered in its members an appreciation for the various military organizations of the United States. Mr. Polster explained exactly what the duties of the military services are in peace time as well as war time. In order to more fully understand the peacetime operations, the club planned field trips to military posts or military installations to witness military procedures first hand.

Through this instruction the boys realized the high standards of the military service organizations.

Chorus Supervises Variety Shows And Advises Frosh

With enthusiasm and a bit of sadness the Emmaus High School Music Club presented "Pop's Finale". As in the past, the show was made up of music from currently popular shows. Since Mr. Peters had announced his retirement, the program was dedicated to "Pop", who served as music supervisor in the district for the past forty years. Vocal soloists were David Nelson who sang "I've Got You Under My Skin", and Bernadette Krause, representative to District Chorus, who offered "I'll Never Walk Alone." Other featured vocalists were Constance Nuver singing "My Favorite Things," and Mary Hunsberger, Jane Peters, Mary Readinger, and Jane Hunt singing "Maria" from "West Side Story".

One main project which the group undertook was the writing and directing of the freshman show, "Which Way West?" Officers managed the committees and supervised production. Responsibility lay with Jane Peters, Chairman; Linda Deisinger, Vice-Chairman; and Lucille Christofaro and Mary Hunsberger, Secretaries. The plot centered about the adventures of four college students traveling across the United States.

These choristers appeared as a major portion of the Christmas assembly. Also in the spirit of the Christmas season, sixteen carolers serenaded the guests at Cedarbrook and the Phoebe Devitt Home.

Four travelers in "Which Way West?" came upon six lovely squaws holding a pow-wow. Gathered around the campfire are Diane Wieder, Dawn Hartman, Debbie Miklencic, Diane Boyko, Cynthia Kammerer, and Connie Billig.

Frequent rehearsals with accompanist Diane Fellman earned Dennis Bruenig, Elwood Rohrbach, Kendall Hubbard, and John Leeser their reputation. Close harmony plus showmanship set audiences applauding whenever they gave a performance.

Frosh Capably Present "Which Way West?"

"Which Way West?" The Freshman Music Club formed the nucleus of the cast of the annual Freshman show. The script was drawn up by the elective music group. The plot centered around college students hitchhiking west, and used various tourist attractions throughout the United States as settings for song and dance acts.

Mr. Rothenberg served as adviser-director and worked with Mr. Peters, music supervisor, to coordinate the project. Since the elective music group consisted of underclassmen only, the production of the show presented the opportunity for a cooperative effort between freshman and senior high students.

Dance Band Swings Out In Jazzy Renditions

Upon hearing the Esquires, audiences found it difficult to believe that this fine dance band was made up of high school students. The quality of their music was comparable to that of most professional organizations in the Lehigh Valley.

The Esquires did not limit themselves to playing for high school functions. Frequently elementary schools requested their services for festivals. Students enjoyed their music at the U. N. Assembly dance and in assembly programs.

Early in spring the strains of sweet and hot Harry James arrangements filled the air. The boys rehearsed nightly to perfect their style and make a bid for the honors in a jazz competition.

Green Hornet Band Adds Color,

The high stepping Green Hornet Band was a familiar sight at football games and many other school activities. Under the direction of Mr. Jack Long this talented group of musicians amazed many football spectators with their half-time performances.

Area Halloween parades always included the Emmaus High Band, which frequently brought home prizes and awards for their impressive performance.

A nine piece combo of band members assisted our Green Hornet Cheerleaders in rooting for our team during the basketball season. The strains of "Bill Bailey" and other familiar tunes soared out in true Dixieland style.

These faithful members were: Dale Thompson, Robert Davey, Joel Oswald, Jack Long, Jr., David Ritter, Kenneth Fatula, Barry Nierhaus, and Dennis Parton.

The musicians also proved that they could do more than march and play instruments. They turned out to be good businessmen, for their pancake and sausage supper and hoagie sale to raise funds for future trips were both financial successes. During the holiday season they conducted the annual public Christmas party.

Once again band members were honored by being selected to play in the County and District Bands. Twenty-two members of our high school band represented Emmaus at the County Band Festival at Dieruff High School in Allentown, Pennsylvania. Dennis Parton, Anna Strauch, Jack Long, Jr., Wayne Foster, Kent Kuder, Jeff Bower, and Kenneth Havanko represented Emmaus in the District Band which met at Easton High School March 7, 8, and 9.

During the year our band was host to three visiting bands. The Bucknell University Band came to Emmaus to demonstrate the marching skill they had just learned at camp. Also visiting our school were the Franklin and Marshall College Band and Mansfield State College Band, both rendering very inspiring concerts for the high school students.

Band discipline is maintained through a point system scaled to give credit to those who adhere to the rigid set of standards to be upheld. Demerits are recorded for those who commit infractions.

Winding up this very busy year our Green Hornet Band presented their spring concert March 29. Featured soloists in "Spotlight on Band" were Dale Thompson, trumpeter, in "Dramatic Essay", Jack Lang, Jr., "Ballad For Trombone", and Kenneth Havanko, "Variations On a Tune For Tympany". The concert theme was a novel one—top hats and canes.

Young Musicians Emulate Senior Band

Ninety members of the Cadet Band very willingly spent many hours practicing drills and music for their frequent public appearances.

One thrilling experience of the year for the Cadet Band was the opportunity to perform at a varsity football game. They substituted for the Green Hornet Band in the presentation of the half-time routine at the Lehighon-Emmaus game in the E. H. S. Stadium. Here they entertained a crowd of several thousand spectators.

Under the direction of Mr. Ronald Mosemann, these fine young musicians accepted invitations to march in Halloween Parades all over the Lehigh Valley. Playing in school concerts and at grade school festivals afforded much experience and prepared them for acceptance into the Green Hornet Band later on. Their final appearance this term was made in the Memorial Day Parade in Alburtis.

Those seventh, eighth, and ninth graders who accumulated enough merits earned a reward for the outstanding work they had done. Chenille letters of green and gold were presented to them at a special awards assembly in May.

They made a colorful appearance as they approached preceded by Drum Major Kent Kuder and the corps of Majorettes and colorguard.

Concert Orchestra Completes Busy Season

The Emmaus High School orchestra had an unusually busy season. Directed by Mr. Errol Peters, the twenty-eight musicians provided musical background and intermission entertainment for many of our high school productions.

An assembly program opened their season. The program was varied; selections ranged from light concert pieces to a medley of tunes from "The Sound of Music".

Immediately following the concert for the student body, rehearsals got underway for the freshman show in February. "Which Way West" was a variety show which required music of all types; the orchestra met the challenge with ease and confidence.

Three weeks later they were scheduled to play for "Blood on the Staff" an original musical written by members of the high school chorus. Unfortunately this production had to be cancelled because of a sudden snowstorm, but all shared the opinion that rehearsal time was well spent. With two-thirds of the term gone, the biggest event of the year loomed before them. The spring concert during Music Week culminated the activities of all school musical organizations; here the orchestra played several concert numbers and provided accompaniment for choral groups and soloists.

Since musical expression was the aim of the organization, there were many occasions at regular club meetings when the tension was relieved by breaking into jam sessions. Then passers-by heard Dixieland and Rock-and Roll. After that, back to work again with renewed interest.

Fiddling away and obviously engrossed in their music, the girls were undisturbed by the staff photographer. This same intent concentration was evident every Monday morning at scheduled rehearsals.

Through the guidance of Mrs. Verna Seagreaves ap-proximately 150 boys and girls very successful amused their audience on November 30. The members of the cast were chosen from her three choruses—the Eighth Notes, The Seventh Grade Music Makers, and the Boys' Glee Club.

In the operetta "Three Pink Leprechauns" Linda Glad-ding portrayed Kathleen Magee, a young Irish girl of Glen Ellyn, who received three different proposals of marriage on the same night. Because the three boys were pals and their proposals came one following the other, Kathleen thought they were making game of her, so she sweetly promised each one to marry him.

Kathleen's grandmother, played by Carolyn Foster, told her of three pink leprechauns she could wish on. At mid-night four leprechauns appeared and Kathleen took the hand of the fourth. Kathleen told Pinkie, the fourth lepre-chaun, she wanted to marry Brian. Pinkie turned out to be Brian, so Kathleen got her wish.

The choruses were accompanied by Janice Butz, Joan Derr, and Eileen Laudenslager.

Frequently they took time off from their busy schedule to have an informal fun-fest by singing current popular songs and hit Broadway show tunes.

Other programs involving these groups were the assem-bly programs and the Spring Concert given in May.

Girls Aspire To Attain Precision

Developing poise and posture through dance exercises, developing feeling of rhythm and tempo in music, and learning the basic dance techniques were the outstanding objectives of these pert seventh and eighth grade girls.

A new addition to the club curriculum, the Choreography and Dance Instruction Club definitely provided these girls with satisfaction, for they gained valuable experience in performing before an audience.

The two main events in which the girls performed were the Seventh and Eighth Grade Operetta and the Seventh and Eighth Grade Spring Concert. During club periods, Mrs. Joan Koch, adviser, and the dance leaders were often seen demonstrating different dance interpretations to the girls.

Table Tennis Fans Enjoy Fast Indoor Sport

Members of the Table Tennis Club participated in matches for the dual purpose of enjoyment and gaining experience through competitive sportsmanship.

Ping pong, as it is commonly referred to, is played on five by nine-foot tables which are divided across the middle by a six-inch high net. The mallets which are used are rubber faced and the balls are hollow plastic. Single and double games were usually played by the boys, with the game ending at 21 points.

Over and above the fun of the game itself, the boys became aware of the agility and judgment necessary to compete satisfactorily.

Completed Projects Reveal Manual Aptitude

A new club on the Emmaus High School club roster, Wood Carving And Sculpturing Club, kept these ardent youths occupied carving the masterpieces conceived in their imaginations. Among the articles which were constructed were coffee tables, gun racks, lighters, and hatchets, to name a few. At bi-weekly club meetings, these boys could be found drilling and hammering away on partially completed projects or polishing finished products, which were subsequently exhibited in one of the school's showcases.

This club was one of the organizations which appealed to boys interested in woodworking and cabinet making.

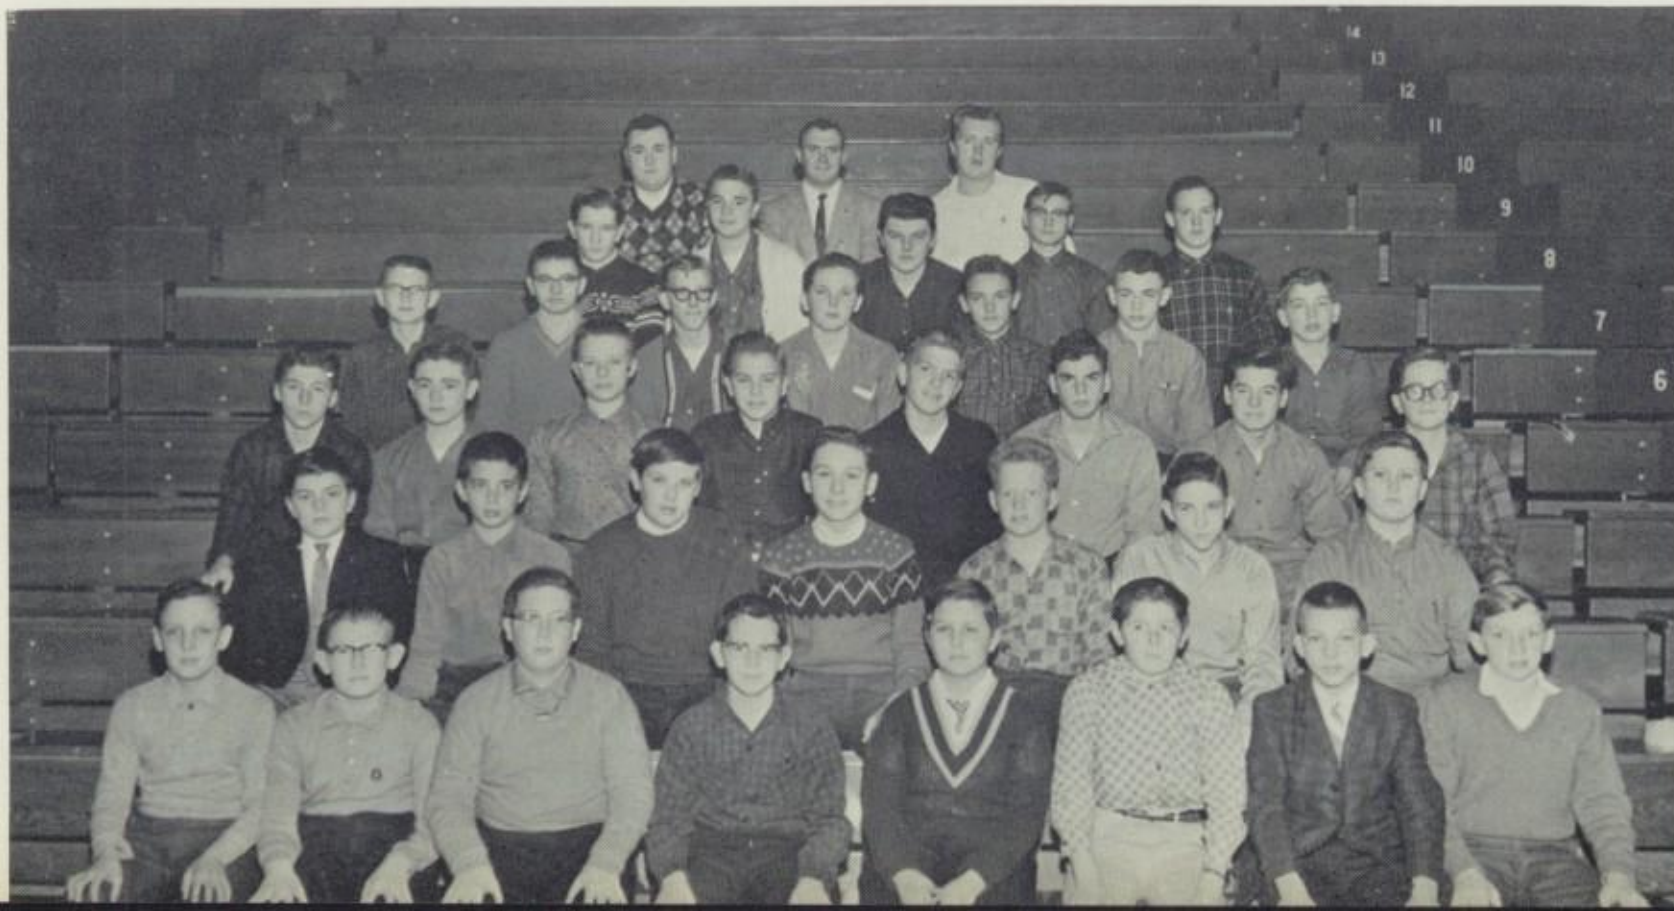

Nature Lovers Study Rules Of Out-of-Doors

High points of the Hunting and Fishing Club were learning and respecting the regulations concerning hunting, fishing, and gun safety, and becoming better informed on the subject of fish and game. This included studying the legal hunting and fishing seasons for deer, bear, small game, trout, and bass.

During the year the boys voluntarily participated in the Unami sponsored Junior Rifle Club to learn rifle safety and shooting. Before actually hunting out-of-doors, the members conceived a basic idea of the principles of the sport and the way to pursue it according to the rules in a sportsmanlike manner.

Set Apart Varsity "E" Members As Scholar Athletes

Varsity "E" Club members stand out in a crowd because of their dark green Varsity "E" jackets with gold emblems, so proudly worn. In order to pay for these jackets, Varsity "E" Club, one of the most active clubs in E.H.S., sponsored its annual events such as hoagies sales, dances after basketball games, and the faculty game.

This year's faculty game took place February 2 following a rare basketball appearance by Varsity "E" boys versus the Key Club team. E.H.S. teachers, as always, managed to captivate enthusiastic audiences with their comical antics and outlandish costumes. Pajamas seemed to be the latest fashion this year!

Mr. Alfred Neff, adviser to this group, stressed and promoted better understanding of sportsmanship and character building in order that the whole school might benefit.

Service was another major item in the Varsity "E" contribution record. Ushering at basketball games served the school. Spectators from the community and visiting teams found their warmth and courtesy impressive.

"All right now! We need a couple of clown's," Mr. Neff gathers Varsity "E" members to recruit ushers for the water carnival.

Mr. Deischer beams as he unwraps a sterling silver punch bowl just presented by Dale Fink. This tribute was designed to honor the originator of the Varsity "E" group for his many years of devoted service as Faculty Athletic Manager.

Sports Enthusiasts Probe Origin Of Various Sports

Members of this club proportioned their time studying and becoming more familiar with the various sports in the United States and the rest of the world. Concerning themselves not only with high school sports but also sports in collegiate and professional ranks, these enthusiastic boys became well informed on all aspects of sports by contacting a number of college and professional teams for information and statistics. Useful knowledge served as a basis for arriving at accurate conclusions. Every seasonal sport was touched upon in studies and discussions which provided the boys with a broader concept of sports.

Young Grapplers Gain Experience And Training

Creating an interest in the sport of wrestling, promoting good sportsmanship, and learning the fundamental holds and moves are the essential objectives of this club. At each regularly scheduled home meet, the members of the Wrestling Club put on a number of exhibition bouts. These, in turn, were appraised by their adviser, Mr. Robert Bottorf, who offered helpful suggestions to strengthen weaknesses.

The highlights of the year came for these boys when movies were shown and distinguished wrestlers visited their meetings to address them on fundamentals of wrestling.

Sports Analysts Evaluate Basketball Strategy

The main objectives of this club were to create a deeper understanding of the game, to instill an appreciation for different types of offenses and defenses a team may encounter, and to improve skills. Intensive study of rules and regulations increased the boys' value as players and increased their enjoyment as spectators.

They found it interesting to investigate just what colleges look for in an athlete. Source materials from which they gleaned information on this subject were books authored by outstanding coaches of college teams.

These young cagers cheered the Hornets faithfully and occasionally attended local college contests.

Junior High Boys Strive For Physical Fitness

Gymnastics and its fundamentals seemed to intrigue the seventh and eighth graders who enthusiastically accepted this new club. The members of this club benefited physically by developing their bodies and mentally by building confidence.

Potential gymnasts found it a great thrill to improve in agility and form by executing standard feats on gym apparatus. As they became more skillful, they attempted performances of increasing difficulty.

At all times Mr. Krebs, adviser, emphasized the importance of safety measures in using equipment properly to minimize the possibility of accident and injury.

This club widened the path of opportunity for the younger students who wished to join the senior high school's Gym Club.

Gym Clubs Sponsor East Stroudsburg College

Gym Team

Looking like an angel learning to fly, Kenneth Key executes a lever during a gym club practice period.

Improving gymnastic skills, learning novel and more difficult stunts, and improving body coordination were the chief aims of the agile gymnasts in the Boys' Gym Club. Throughout the years both Gym Clubs have provided enjoyable entertainment for pupils of E. H. S. as well as for residents of the community. This year they sponsored the East Stroudsburg State College Gymnastics team in order that everyone could witness the spectacular feats and precise coordination of these very capable people.

Gym Club boys learned how to handle themselves on the highbar, the rings, and the trampoline, and mastered the skill of performing feats. In tumbling the boys fearlessly dived over as many as ten or twelve boys at one time.

Girls Strive To Improve Coordination Through Gymnastics

Linda Beers bounces gaily on the trampoline in a demonstration for other club members.

Members of the Girls' Gym Club were expected to develop their talents in gymnastics, tumbling, and rhythmic activities. They accomplished their goals by working out on the mats, trampolines, rings, horse, and parallel bars.

These girls were chiefly noted for their precision in performing numerous tumbling acts in which cartwheels, forward rolls, handstands, back bends, flips, and many others were practiced. These stunts required great agility and strength, and the girls as well as the boys possessed the qualities necessary to performing.

This year the girls shared with the boys' club the responsibility of sponsoring the East Stroudsburg State College Gymnastics team which drew enthusiastic crowds to the Emmaus High School gymnasium.

Endurance And Drive Displayed By Trackmen

Eleven boys, all ardent workers, showed keen interest in promoting cross country running and strengthening their present interests in Track and Field. Mr. Johns, adviser and coach of the Emmaus High School track team, made great strides in helping these boys discover their weaknesses and the means to overcome them.

Although it was not possible for members to participate in all the areas of track and field because of limited club periods, they managed to practice in the areas in which they were most interested.

Since the sport itself offers a variety of events, club plans provided diversity and appeal.

Golf Club Participates In Tournament Play

Because their adviser, Mr. Smith, was an experienced golfer and could impart sound advice, these boys advanced their skill with surprising speed. Behind their skill lay a sound awareness of the basic rules of the game and the code of etiquette relative to golf.

Regular meetings were interesting but could not compare with getting out on the course. Tournaments meant winners, and winners meant trophies. Trophies were purchased with funds raised by selling candy.

During the many weeks when the ground was covered with snow, films served as an interesting substitute for outdoor play.

Archers Practice To Improve Marksmanship

With an eye to forming a better E.H.S. Archery Team, Mr. Black, the adviser, encouraged tournaments with other schools. This promoted good sportsmanship and tested the precision and accuracy of the targeteers by challenging them to perform in competitive situations.

Danny Rauch, versatile president of this club, has held four first places including the Pennsylvania State Archers Association State Field Championship.

Since the boys devoted most of their free time practicing, competition among the club members was keen. Nothing pleased them more than challenging an opponent or trying to better their own records.

Girls Develop Aquatic Skill And Grace

Members of this club strived to perfect the nine basic strokes as well as elementary water ballet skills. The water ballet was performed by groups of girls forming patterns to the accompaniment of appropriate music. The strokes practiced by these girls were the difficult trudgen and trudgen crawl which consists of a scissors kick and a hand over hand stroke. The butterfly stroke proved highly enervating at first, but constant training and conditioning soon enabled the aquamaids to execute them with minimum effort.

Knowledge of these skills was mandatory to achieving a very practical goal. Each swimmer's objective was to pass life saving and instructor courses.

Circus Theme In Annual Aquacade

Time consuming practice fitted girls to audition for Dolphin Club. Only those having grace and versatility in swimming stunts were chosen to participate in the annual water show. Mrs. Herman, adviser of the club, as always, limited her club to sixty girls for economical reasons as well as space problems. All the hard work done in preparing for the show was evident in the actual performance, for the Dolphin Club drew sellout crowds every year. The girls were rewarded with charms given according to the length of membership in the club.

This year, Carnival was the theme. Carnival specialties were enacted; trapeze artists, tumblers, fat ladies, animal trainers, and last but not least, comical seals all had their moment in the spotlight. Soloist Suzanne Huber executed a wide array of spectacular stunts to climax the evening's performance. Resplendent in individually designed Easter bonnets, the entire cast appeared in a rousing finale.

Varsity "E" Club boys, who served as ushers, were dressed as clowns and added to the carnival atmosphere by cavorting among the spectators.

Dexterity, skill, and perfect timing combine to produce aquatic performances which never fail to bring forth compliments. These twelve girls, veterans of many aquacades, are determined to make their last performance the best they have ever done.

Junior High Students Find Cultural Wealth In Books

Reading is a vital necessity in developing character and understanding of everyday problems. It was through the Book Club that the members were encouraged to read and enjoy outstanding books and share the knowledge and impressions obtained from each.

After completing a book, the reader listed pertinent data and wrote a resume of the plot on an index card.

The cards were filed and could be consulted by other interested members for ideas leading to the selection of their next book.

Students found satisfaction and profited greatly from this association in that they were urged to read everything available. This established a basis of knowledge which was applied in many curriculum areas.

Travelers Cover The World In Imaginary Tour

Increasing each member's knowledge of nations abroad as well as of the United States was the prime purpose of the Travel Club.

The club periods were spent discussing interesting foreign places to visit and enjoy. Each member from time to time did research on a designated country and at the meeting gave a realistic account of what a trip to this country would be like.

Several of the girls already had the opportunity to visit countries abroad and, therefore, could tell the group firsthand about the many rewarding experiences they encountered.

Occasionally slides were shown to increase the appreciation of the scenic beauty and aesthetic surroundings of certain areas in Europe.

Boys Of All Ages Find Delight In Ancient Games

Clubs Serve To Teach And Improve Skill

Chess, a game developed in the eighteenth century, intrigued a large number of boys and girls of all ages. Its popularity increased so rapidly that to accommodate all those interested it became imperative to form three chess clubs; the Eighth Grade Chess Club, advised by Mr. Richards, the Seventh Grade Chess Club under Mr. Roeder's leadership, and the Senior High School Chess Club, supervised by Mr. Ortt.

Upon observing the chess enthusiasts, one saw expressions of concentration and perplexity showing on each player's face. Occasionally the murmured sound "check" was heard, and then deep silence set in again.

Competitive spirit was, of course, a must. The Winter Handicap Tournament and the Spring Knockout Tournament were two of the many battles of wits. Victory in tournament play was the dream of each competitor.

While the chess players sat deep in thought, the rest concentrated upon developing strategy in their games of checkers.

Those awaiting their next challenger observed technique of others busily at play or indulged in a bit of friendly kibitzing.

Knitting Serves As A Practical Pastime

Ribbing, knit one, purl one, and cable were some of the terms which became very familiar to members of the Knitting Club. Their adviser, Mrs. Iobst, taught the fundamentals of the art to beginners. In turn, she assisted the more experienced knitters in their attempts at more involved stitches and pattern knitting.

The Knitting Club was organized to teach a craft which can become a useful and rewarding hobby.

Most popular project selections were sweaters, scarfs, slippers, hats, and gloves. The greatest pleasure came when, after many hours of work, a girl could proudly wear a garment she had made.

Girls Study Design And Learn Tailoring Tricks

Like the senior high club, the Eighth Grade sewing club organized to provide instruction for girls interested in domestic arts. They learned the necessary procedures and methods necessary to sew well, and found the end result to be an enlarged personal wardrobe. The individuality of the person was reflected in the type of garment she created.

Imagination and ingenuity were challenged in the making of clever gifts from ordinary, everyday items. Girls expressed amazement when they realized what attractively original creations could be made from discarded objects and remnants.

Deft Fingers Create All Types Of Needlecraft

During club periods the members of the Needlecraft Club, with helpful instructions from their adviser, Mrs. Dissinger, learned each type of needlecraft, including knitting, sewing, crocheting, embroidering, quilting, and rug making.

The objectives of this club were to encourage novices and to increase the skills of those more advanced in needlework. Girls learned that an enjoyable pastime has a very practical side.

Whenever the opportunity presented itself, the club invited a talented individual to demonstrate the procedure used to develop a certain phase of needlecraft. In this way the group learned to work carefully and methodically at a skill which would prove amusing as a hobby and valuable in homemaking.

Talented Seamstresses Make Their Own Wardrobes

Through techniques observed in the Sewing Club the members learned to discern the lines of clothes most suitable for their particular figures.

Because of the ingenuity of their adviser, Miss Stayer, the girls learned the art of developing individual talents in sewing and tailoring. Attempting to design their own clothes was most fascinating of all. In making a shirt, dress, or coat they became experienced in following pattern directions, using an electric sewing machine and its attachments, and in altering their projects to achieve a perfect fit.

As the term fled by, girls approached more involved sewing projects with increasing confidence.

Cleaning up is as much a part of cooking as preparing the food. Paul Stauffer and John Moritz have no qualms about doing dishes—the easy way. “Nothing to it,” is their smiling comment.

Nothing like a cup of strong, hot coffee for an eye-opener! Patrick Squire, Roy Afflerbach, Richard Blair, and David Nelson enjoy a chat over their morning coffee.

Boys Strive To Master Culinary Art

Hot biscuits, crisp bacon, eggs, and coffee were relished on club mornings when the chef clubbers prepared their own breakfast. They always had an answer to the old cliché, “What’s cookin’?” After learning the techniques of creating fine-textured, appetizing dishes, the boys plunged into preparing spaghetti dinners and baking cookies, cakes, and doughnuts. The results were delicious; fellow classmates sampled the food and vouched for its tastiness.

All club meetings were well seasoned with fun and frolic. There were many speculations about the results as foods were being prepared. There were times when things went wrong. But the progress was amazing, and at the year’s end each boy could truthfully boast of his culinary talent.

Model Airplane Club

Interest in the construction of model airplanes gave the members a chance to fly the results of their handiwork. To promote this interest became the chief objective of the Model Airplane Club.

Winter meetings were devoted to discussions and the building of their model airplanes. When each craft was finished, Mr. Henning and the boys awaited spring to test their planes.

Hobbyists in the Coin and Matchcover Club worked toward their principal objective, learning the value and the history of the items they collected. Elaborate displays were assembled as members learned from each other and exchanged information.

In fall, winter, and spring sports E.H.S. athletic teams again concluded their respective seasons with enviable records. Sports are considered an integral part of the total program. It is here that personalities are developed, characters are strengthened, and academic excellence is not only stressed but also required of all participants.

athletics

Well Rounded Sports Program Emphasizes Character And Scholarship

Athletics at Emmaus High offer any high school boy or girl the opportunity to develop physically and mentally, to experience the thrill of competitive play, and to uphold the traditionally fine reputation of his school. Requirements for participation are simply that he be willing to put forth his best effort and that he maintain a high academic standing.

A varied program of eleven major sports is administered by Mr. W. Lucas Lobb, Athletic Director and Head Football Coach. His personal enthusiasm for sports is infectious and inspiring to all young athletes.

Emmaus athletes command respect wherever they go. They have earned a reputation for good sportsmanship, fair play, and courtesy throughout the Lehigh Valley League. They have won the admiration of fellow students as well.

Ready for substitution, boys receive instruction from him while Assistant Coach Robert Bottorf handles communications with off-field spotters.

Mike Johnson Receives Top Honors As Scholar-Athlete

When a student receives recognition he brings honor to his school as well as to himself. This year students and faculty of Emmaus High were justly proud of Michael Johnson who was singled out of a group of twenty-three athletes from Lehigh Valley Schools and named top Scholar-Athlete of the Lehigh Valley by The Lehigh Valley Chapter, National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame.

V. J. (Pat) Pazzetti, honorary president of the chapter and a recent Hall of Fame selection, presented the plaque to Mike.

Mike's athletic record is exceeded only by his excellent scholastic standing. His performance as a student, as co-captain of the '62 Green Hornet football team, and as a wrestler, to name just a few of his achievements, should be a source of inspiration to every student.

Mike Johnson (center) accepts the plaque naming him top scholar athlete from V. J. Pazzetti. Woody Hayes, head coach at Ohio State and main speaker at this year's event, smilingly observes the ceremony.

Powerful '62 Green Hornets Exceed Expectations

Bill Trotter personifies determination as he eludes his pursuer and pushes on toward the goal in the game against Parkland, the season's opener.

As Drive And Determination Make Them Champs

Good football teams play hard, fast, and for keeps. The final sound of the gun on Turkey Day signaled victory for the Big Green, and, to make the victory even sweeter, with it came the long sought after Lehigh Valley League Championship. Our gridiron heroes shared the title with hard-hitting Northampton but tears of happiness were shed as an E. H. S. first was accredited to the team of 1962.

Following an arduous week of rugged practices and drilling at Camp Dent and at home, our Hornets began their most successful season under the ingenious coaching of Luke Lobb and assistants Al Neff and Glenn Johns.

The powerful Green saw their first competition under the lights at E. H. S., with a capacity crowd watching to see if pre-season predictions of a mere average E. H. S. squad were justified. The yells of an avid cheering section provided the background of a 27-6 finish over the Parkland opponents. Bill Trotter, senior halfback, scored in the opening quarter, while four touchdowns later the Trojans officially admitted defeat.

Hitting the field like conquering heroes, co-captains Mike Johnson and Dale Fink burst through the hoop and spur their teammates to victory over the Whitehall Zephyrs while a capacity crowd went wild.

Capacity Crowds Flock To See The "Big Green"

September 14 at our stadium another huge crowd saw the Green Hornets eke out a 24-19 victory over the dangerous Panthers of Quakertown. The Quakers struck first with a touchdown in the beginning minutes of play. E. H. S. banded back with a 75-yard dash from scrimmage by senior Bill Trotter to tie the score at 6-6. Tension mounted as the half ended at 13-12 in the Quakers' favor. The Hornets came through with a 24-19 victory.

A week later, the ripe winners could not be beaten. Stroudsburg was swallowed in a 33-18 defeat in the Hornets' league opener. Emmaus was definitely a contender for the crown as quarterback Evan Burian expertly passed for two T. D.'s to halfback Bill Trotter, hard-hitting Dale Fink plunged for one, and halfbacks Denny Sicher and Ron Merkel accounted for the remaining points.

The big day finally arrived as over 4,000 loyal fans packed Northampton's Wolfe Field, September 29, to see the annual attempt to break Northampton's long running string of league wins. Emmaus outplayed the Kids in every known concept of the game except scoring as they dropped a 14-6 decision to the Lehigh Valley League Champs. In the roughest and most exciting game of the season our boys threatened with five drives making only one pay off while Northampton took full advantage of their two. Our boys outfought, outplayed, and outwitted the Konkrete Pillars, but lost in the end.

The Hornets again showed their toxic sting, as E. H. S. stands rocked over the 32-6 defeat of the Slatinton eleven. Thrills began in the first quarter when sophomore Randy Seagreaves ran 10 yards around left end to score. Fighting back, the Slaters tied the score at 6-6 only to lose ground as Fichter scored on a pass from Quarterback Evan Burian. Stortz scored. Dynamos Fink and Seagreaves followed with two more for the Emmaus win.

The Stingers, fresh from victory over the Slaters, mowed down Catty for the fifth win. The 31-6 mauling surprised most spectators as a much closer game was expected. Den Sicher charged for the first period touchdown, Fink for the second to leave a 13-6 half time score. Fink scored in the third period, Stortz and Jones in the fourth to display the mightiness of the Big Green.

October 19 was the night of the Hornets sixth win over Lehigh 45-20 on our home field. All fire and brimstone broke loose as Sicher and Seagreaves made spectators rise to their feet on 55 and 89 yard touchdown plays respectively. Fink couldn't be stopped as he tallied three scores to his credit and gained 160 yards in 25 carries.

The Hornets stung again at Palmerton October 27 stepping one notch closer to the League title. Palmerton had beaten unconquerable Northampton the week before, and good luck tokens were taken on the journey to the Bombers fighting field. Fears were groundless as E. H. S. plastered the Blue and White in a 26-0 shutout. Trotter and Fink carried the ball to the Bombers three yard line; Seagreaves plunged over to give the Hornets a 12-0 lead in the first half. On the tackle eligible play, Hersh returned to the bench on Cloud 9 after scoring E. H. S.'s third T. D. A pass from Burian to Stortz led to Sicher's thundering 10 yards for the final score.

The Warriors of Wilson Boro handed the Hornets their second defeat in 9 outings, 46-19. Wilson took an early lead and held it.

For seniors Turkey Day meant the last and most important game of their careers. They proudly walked away from a muddy field with a 13-0 victory and the coveted Lehigh Valley League Co-Championship. Need I say more!

Along with the '62 season came such memories as the most enthusiastic crowds ever to follow E. H. S. gridiron boys; the proboscis club, with membership limited to all players with a broken nose; star-studded helmets, worn by players with most tackles, recovered fumbles, or intercepted passes; a beautifully decorated gym for the big pep rally; a deserving group of award-winners; and three cherished trophies. The most important memory, though, is of a group of boys for whom teamwork paid off, who personified good sportsmanship and whose academic achievements were outstanding.

Junior Varsity Closes Season Rating Second In League

Determined and strong, the Baby Hornets deserved as much credit as their big brothers for taking second place in league competition, losing only one game to Lehigh. Emmaus High School's J. V.'s outplayed and outscored Wilson for their second victory of this season, October 1. The score was 19-6. Bob Miller chalked up a touchdown in the first quarter and Scott Corbett another in the second. Fullback Gary Gilbert charged across for another six points. Two weeks later the baby Green were once again victorious when they beat Catty 19-6. Bob Benicoff rolled up two of the Hornet T. D.'s. Dave Terfinko plunged for the other.

Gilbert, Terfinko, and Bennicoff, each scoring twice for E. H. S. were responsible for the crushing victory over Palmerton to make the fifth win in seven outings. One tie and a loss has been recorded to this point. Responsible for this loss were the little Indians from Lehigh. Emmaus led 14-0 at half-time only to see the Indians score in the opening minutes of the third quarter after recovering an E. H. S. fumble. They went on to hold E. H. S. scoreless while they added fourteen more points to their side of the scoreboard. The Hornet defeat handed the Indian Jayvees a winning place in the Lehigh Valley League.

Another trophy is bound to be added when these boys reach varsity status. The fire and drive of the Little Stingers never wavered.

Girls' Hockey Team Upholds Enviably Record

A decisive bulley and Emmaus scoops the opposition, moving the ball downfield for another goal. Our girls' field hockey team has completed its third year at Emmaus High. This fast-moving game has become a popular and favorite sport among spectators as well as participants. Coach Virginia Herman did it again—came through once more with a winning team. The record for the season was an enviable one: six wins, three ties, and one loss.

Following strenuous practices, often in the sizzling sun, the girls plunged into the season with a 6-0 win over Moravian Seminary. Two tie games with Southern Lehigh and Phillipsburg momentarily placed Emmaus at a standstill. But team effort came through and the girls handed Wilson Boro an 8-1 defeat. After a tie game with Southern Lehigh and the only loss of the season suffered to Phillipsburg, the girls completed the season with four consecutive victories.

Surpassing all previous records, the Junior Varsity ended the season with three wins, two losses, and one tie. Gaining worthy experience and knowledge of the game, the J. V.'s will prove their skill on future varsity teams.

Aggressive E. H. S. girls intercept and show their skill by maneuvering the ball toward another goal.

J.V.'s Tie Senior Group For Spirit And Zip

Ever ready to spark our Hornet teams on to victory, cheerleaders served Emmaus High with immeasurable time, effort, and energy. In sunshine or in snow, cheerleaders boosted spirit in any athletic contest and let the boys in green and gold know they were behind them. Under Coach Gwendlyn Armitage both squads maintained their distinct reputation as one of the Lehigh Valley's finest groups.

Selected by a group of faculty members and students, cheerleaders were chosen on the basis of voice, coordination, poise, personality, and familiarity with the cheers. Both squads practiced long hours during the summer to prepare for the opening football game early in September. Throughout the remainder of the year, after school practices provided time for improvement and perfection.

School spirit zoomed to a new high this year thanks to lively pep rallies, the posting of victory signs, and the addition of a pep band. The gym, ablaze with green and gold for the traditional Turkey Day Pep Rally, was a spectacular display of enthusiasm, loyalty, and pride on behalf of the cheerleaders. Constantly trying to arouse student interest and school spirit, the varsity revitalized old cheers and initiated new cheers and several fight songs.

Not to be forgotten are the substitutes, who filled in when one of the regulars was missing. Being able to fill each girl's position required just as much, if not more, knowledge of the cheers, songs, and chants.

Four senior varsity members, Pam Baumgartner, Carol Billman, Janice Graef, and Susie Kunkle, will be graduated, but able underclassmen will undoubtedly equal their spirit and energy.

Slow Down In Second

Emmaus High School's gym has a seating capacity of over fifteen hundred; usually every seat was filled by fans wanting to cheer their team. Emmaus, as always, had a basketball team of which to be proud; proud of its physical abilities in the playing of a good game, and proud of its reputation as a team with zeal, spirit and character as a ball club.

November 28 marked Emmaus' opening encounter against Southern Lehigh at home. The Hornets snatched a win, 50-37. In the remainder of pre-league competition, the team fared well, winning three and losing four games.

In its first league game Emmaus downed Palmerton by a decisive score of 58-37. More determined after a defeat by Catasauqua, the Green Hornets buzzed their way to four more victories before the end of the first half of competition. The rest of the season followed with some disappointing defeats and some heartening wins and ended with a successful record of eleven wins and eleven losses.

The team's leading performers this year proved to be Dale Stortz, Carl Naugle, and Richard Lauchnor, the high scorer being Naugle with a total of 237 points and an average of ten points per game. Upperclassmen Robert Schweitzer, John Moritz, Daniel Hill, Raymond Wessner, Francis Gehman, Robert Palmer, Evan Burian, Paul Stauffer, and Douglas Mahler were definite assets to the team both in scoring and dependability. Malcolm Brown, playing first string as a sophomore showed excellent promise.

Emmaus was fortunate in having a junior varsity basketball team which showed great promise.

November 28 the junior hornets auspiciously started their season by defeating the Southern Lehigh team by a score of 50-27. The most exciting conquests of the year were Emmaus over Lehigh 33-32. Emmaus over Slatington, 59-54, and the Hornets over Central Catholic 56-

54. Two defeats handed to Catasauqua were most satisfying.

After twenty-one hard and thrilling games, the season ended with the yearlings emerging the victors over the Slaters by a score of 59-54.

The Hornets, led by Seagreaves, Gladfelter, Berry, and Stevenson, had a final record of eleven wins and three losses to enter into the record book.

Lassies Snatch League Title

Winning the Crown of the Lehigh Valley Inter-scholastic Girls Basketball League was the goal of each girl. Through much work, practice, and encouragement from Miss Armitage, they attained this goal.

Although they lost the first game to Central Catholic, their determination charged them on to a 13-game winning streak. While the Hornets tallied 684 points they held their opponents to a hard reached 410 points.

The defensive unit appeared to be valuable throughout the entire season. They especially worked together in keeping their opponents to a mere 8 points in the Stroudsburg game, while the offensive attack soared on to gain 54 points. This game proved to be their high point; they scored the greatest number of points of the season and held the Stroudsburg lassies to a minimum.

Among the high scorers were Linda Schmick with 291 points for the season and a 3-year span of 748 points. Barbara Mueller and Donna Peet had 150 and 95 respectively.

Co-captains Barbara Mueller and Marion Hunsicker, the only seniors, did a marvelous job in keeping the spirit of the team high.

Mermen Show Zeal And Verve—Diligent Practices

Four swimmers pulled their ways into the last lap of their event and the cheers of the crowd became more vehement. Often a close race determined another victory or another defeat for the Emmaus High School Swimming Team. With eight returning lettermen to aid the team both physically and morally, the Emmaus team boasted its first successful season since its organization two years ago.

Much of the unity and success of the team was due to the spirited coaching of Mr. Richard Black. After a narrow defeat by Bethlehem, Emmaus High School drowned Wilson Boro and Whitehall in two decisive victories. William Allen and Dieruff proved more proficient than the Hornets; they lost to William Allen by a score of 27-59, and to Dieruff, 31-55. Following an easy win over East Stroudsburg, Emmaus was faced with its two most contentious adversaries, Easton and Parkland. It was a jubilant night for the mermen when they overpowered their long-time rival, Easton. After a win by Parkland over Emmaus, the team went to the District XI swimming meet held at Lehigh University where Emmaus placed in five events to end a rewarding season well.

Matmen Strive For Victory With Enthusiasm And Spirit

Hornet wrestlers had another fine season, compiling a record of 6-4. The squad ran up a total of 256 points against 242 for their opponents. Leading the parade was Mike Johnson (156) with a 9-1 record, followed by Art Tomaschek (138), Larry Schuler (112) and Bob Schuler (123), all of whom had an 8-2 record.

The matmen opened their season by tackling a powerful Dieruff team and dropped a 43-16 decision. After losing the second meet to Northampton, the Hornets bounced back by defeating Nazareth 29-22. Again, after another loss to William Allen, the Hornets trounced Notre Dame 37-13. Coach Krebs' crew followed with two successive victories—Southern Lehigh 24-23 and Parkland 27-24. The Hornets continued their winning ways with a 36-13 ruin over Whitehall. The streak was snapped by Wilson Boro, who dumped the grapplers 38-11. In the final meet the Hornets soundly trounced Slatinton 46-5.

Twelve boys entered the Western Division Tournament at William Allen. Bob and Larry Schuler went on to the District Tournament at Bethlehem where Larry went into the semifinals and Bob came out second in the finals.

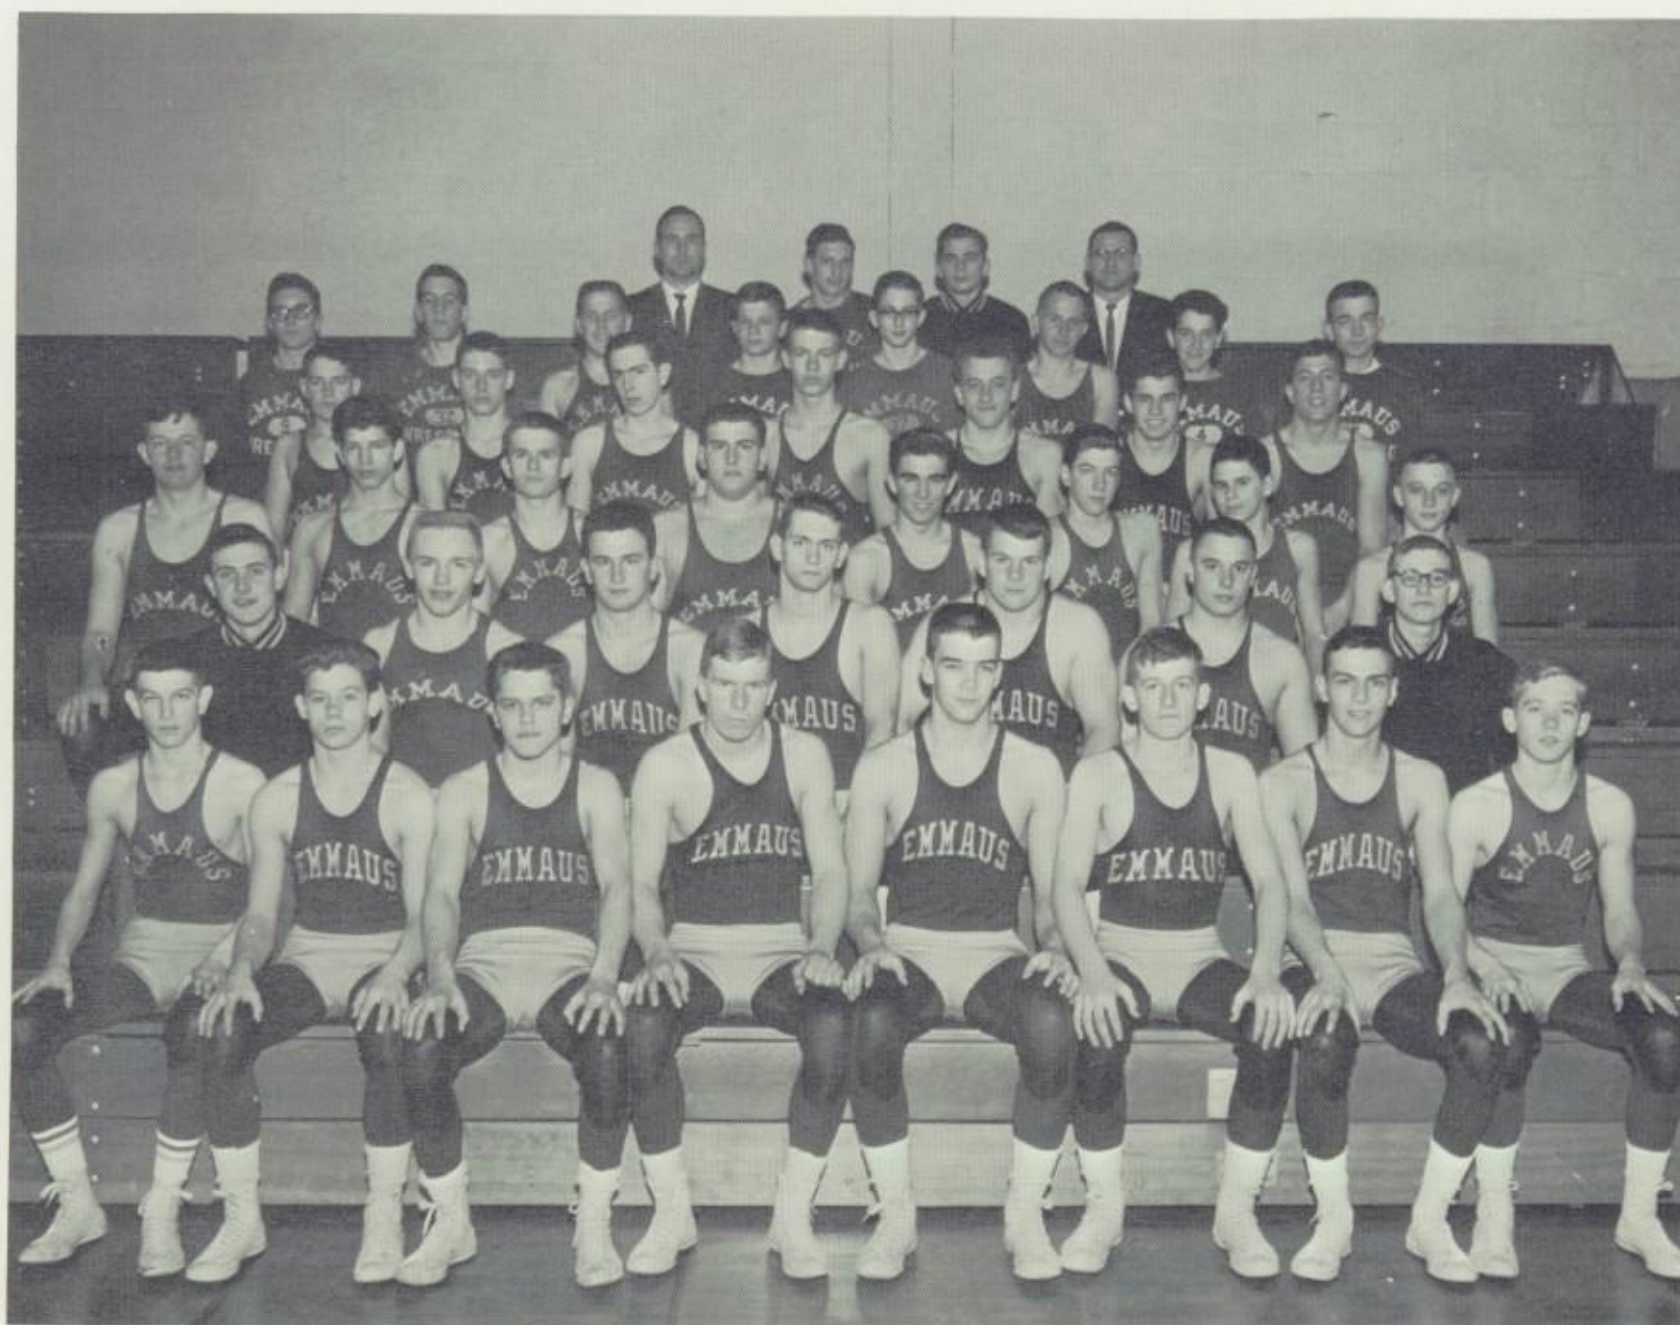

The outlook for next year looks very promising, with nine letter winners returning. They are Robert Schuler, Robert Beganie, Brian Evangelista, Charles Zellner, Russell Kerschner, Richard Sellers, Robert Althouse, Richard March, and John Umlauf.

Trackmen Practice Rigorously To Prepare For Successful Season

Practice sessions open with calisthenics. The weights group trains vigorously to develop the stamina, coordination, and physical fitness necessary to make a worthy showing when entering into league and district competition.

Trackmen Vie For Placement In League Competition

Coach Glenn Johns, determined to better last year's 5-4 season, began calisthenics and roadwork the second week in March. Outstanding returnees were Jack Jones and Larry Everhard in the distance running; Dale Stortz aiming to better his record-setting discus throw of last year; Dale Fink in the 100 and 200-yard dashes; and Mike Johnson again displaying his magnificent pole vaults.

All events require top-notch physical condition. As a consequence, it was necessary for all fieldmen and runners to work out constantly. To train more efficiently and to prepare for meets in a minimum period of time, coaches organized the team into four basic groups: sprinters, jumpers, weightmen, and distance runners. Each of these groups had as its leader an experienced athlete who specialized in each respective area. This man was responsible for administering the daily program to his group. By this individualized instruction, candidates perfected their particular skills.

Men were entered to train in all three major categories: the weight events, shot put, discus, and javelin; running events, 100 and 200-yard sprints and the 440,880, and mile long distance jogs; jumping events, pole vault, broad jump, and high jump.

Participants for interscholastic meets competed among themselves for placement.

Green and Gold fieldmen anxiously awaited their first meet. Success seemed assured on the basis of previous records. As always, it was certain that regardless of the outcome, they would win humbly or lose graciously.

Optimistic Outlook As '63 Season Closes In

Snow-covered wet grounds delayed the start of spring training, but the boys finally took to the field in mid-March.

Coached by Mr. Al Neff, the Green Hornet baseball squad, hoping to better last year's record of seven wins and six losses, opened the season depending on veteran players John Leeser, Harry Nonnemacher, Paul Stauffer, and Philip Weida. Further hopes were centered on promising newcomers.

Aiding the boys during practice and in play were high quality pitching equipment, common sense, unerring control, and physical fitness.

Having lost eight top players who were graduated last June, Mr. Neff still felt confident that he could build a powerful team from approximately fifty candidates who came out for the team.

Capable boys, each versed in his particular position, looked forward to opening day, April 4. William Allen was scheduled to be the first of a thirteen game slate.

The Lehigh Valley League teams to be faced in competition for the title were Northampton, Catasauqua, Slatington, Stroudsburg, Palmerton, Lehigh, and Whitehall.

Undefeated Golfers Make Their Sixth Bid For League Crown

Eager to equal or better their 8 win, 1 tie, and no loss record of last year, the golf team, began practices in March with enthusiasm. Returning lettermen Pete Greenawalt, Jeff Billie, Doug Mahler, and Keith Kuhns bolstered team strength in the stiff competition.

The Hornet's home course, Brookside Country Club, was the scene of concentrated practice to prepare the linksmen for their opening match April 15, Easton being the first of their ten scheduled matches. Great skill and competence were the end results of long hours of practice under the watchful eye of Coach Smith. High hopes of a winning season were justified as the golf team has taken the league championship every year since a golf league was organized four years ago. Before a league existed, the Hornet golfers played their first two seasons and were undefeated.

This year Emmaus High School added softball as a varsity sport. Coach Gwendlyn Armitage and twenty-five girls began their training in March for the 1962-1963 season. The Hornets could be found on the diamond putting in long hours of practice and learning the fundamentals of the game so as to become skilled players; and when weather forced them indoors, they mastered signals and discussed strategy during skull practices. It was a rigorous time schedule but the end was well worth the effort. Extensive experience was gained because of the increased playing schedule. Keen competition awaited them in their encounters with Quakertown, Palisades, Upper Perkiomen, and Southern Lehigh. The squad's enthusiasm was at its peak.

Tennis And Softball Added As Varsity Sports

After weeks of intensive practice, Coach Sheckler's tennis team awaited its first match of the season. April 2 marked the date of the match, which was played at Wilson Boro and signified the opening of an exciting season. A schedule of fourteen games face the Emmaus boys, but they approached it confidently.

For the lads who participated in this action-packed sport, a night of practice consisted largely of instruction and practice in the fundamentals of the game, serving and proper grips and strokes. Only those who proved worthy at practice were given the opportunity to compete inter-scholastically.

Underclassmen comprised the bulk of the team, which was in its second year of competition. Since only four men will be leaving the team because of graduation this year, the chances for the other squad members to build a powerful team are promising.

Continuous service and trust on the part of both the patron and the advertiser is the basis of growing unity in our prospering community. It is our wish that the previous patronage of our readers to our advertisers will continue and grow. In '63 and the future this will prove beneficial and essential to the growth, prosperity, and unification of our business district, residential area, and surrounding boroughs.

Acknowledgment

A yearbook is the result of many hours of work by many people. This edition could never have been published without the aid of faculty, administration, professionals, and businessmen.

The Tattler Staff thanks the following company and individuals for their assistance in the production of this book:

PRINTING, BINDING, AND COVERS

Delmar Printing Co.

P. O. Box 9347

Charlotte, North Carolina

PROFESSIONAL PHOTOGRAPHY

Mr. Bernard E. Fella

Calvin and Fella Studios

617 Linden Street

Allentown, Pennsylvania

The staff wishes to add a personal thank you to Mr. Howard K. Deischer, Principal; members of the faculty; and to Larry Everhard and George Katchak, Class of '63 for serving as student photographers. The staff also thanks Gary Ludwick, Class of '59, for donating several photographs.
